MDOT Has New Plans for Gorham Bill Ambrose

he Maine Department of Transportation (MDOT) is planning to construct two new projects in Gorham. In the offing are a roundabout for the intersection of New Portland Road and Brackett Road/Libby Avenue, and a Park and Ride lot located close to the Bypass terminus with South Street (Route 114).

The new roundabout is seen as the best way to reduce the dangerous conditions at the accident-prone crossing. The estimated cost of the project is $1,260,000, most of which will be sought through the Federal Highway "Hazard Elimination Program." The availability of funding will determine the timetable for this undertaking. MDOT's Herb Thomson said that the earliest date that the money could be forthcoming is October 1, 2009, which would lead to construction beginning in the spring of 2010.

Recently a three-car accident occurred at this site. The first car ran the stop sign and was struck by a second car which resulted in the first car being pushed in front of an oncoming third vehicle. This is just one example of the many accidents that have occurred at this intersection.

MDOT will seek bids for the Park and Ride lot within the next few weeks. This project has a high priority with the agency and construction will probably begin this year. It will be sited on the west side of South Street at the power lines and will include a bus loop along with 77 parking spaces. Thomson believes that the lot will cost "quite a bit more" than the preliminary estimate of $80,000. Catherine Small is the Project Manager for MDOT.

Elm Street Building Compliant with Town Code Sheri Faber

avid Douin, doing business as JED Assets, obtained a permit in March 2007 to shore up the house at 8 Elm St. and convert it to office space. After spending about $20,000, Douin determined there was no way he could save the building. Although a private building inspection had been done, it had not shown that the house had sagged about 4 inches making it very expensive to restore.

In October 2007, Douin obtained a permit to tear down an existing garage and some sheds at the site and to build a new garage using the same footprint. Douin had always planned to tear down the garage but had originally planned to use it for parking space. The Code Office advised Douin that this permit meant he could use the building only for a garage and that the second floor could only be used Douin's plans changed and he decided to convert the building into office space. He had not yet gone through the Site Plan Review process when he made this decision. Gorham's current building code does not permit parking in front of a commercial building.

In order to comply with Town

Codes, Douin is currently constructing an 8'x 24' storage shed near Elm Street. Parking will be permitted behind this shed (which means parking will be in front of the original building); an acceptable option to the Town."I knew that he planned to build an office building even though the permit was for a garage," said Code Enforcement Officer Clint Cushman. "We had discussed the parking issue as well."

Douin had been negotiating with Hannaford to have access to the site off their access road on Elm Street but these plans did not work out. Douin acknowledged he has made a lot of mistakes and been forced to change his plans but said that throughout the process "Clint Cushman has been tremendously helpful and has been an advocate for the project from the start."The building is zoned for four commercial units, two upstairs (which will be completed at a later date) and two on the first floor. Chiropractor Rob Lavoie and Douin, who is a CPA, will both have their offices on the first floor. They are "very excited about opening their businesses in Gorham," said Douin.

Man Arrested on Felony Child Pornography Charges Sheri Faber

onald Meserve, 63, of Gorham, has been charged with three counts of possession of pornography after Maine State Police reviewed files on his home computer and found pornographic photos/videos of children under age 12. Maine State Police are part of a nationwide effort to combat child pornography. The charges are a Class C felony. Police are still examining the files on his computer as there are vast amounts of material to go through. Additional charges may be brought based on any new evidence that police find.

Meserve was arrested at this time because he had close access to children at the Teddy Bear Day Care, run by a family member at the house in which he lives. Sgt. Glenn Lang of the Maine State Police stated "there was no indication of any connection to the daycare children but we prefer to err on the side of caution."

The daycare has been closed while the Department of Health and Human Services conducts an investigation. Meserve formerly owned TNT Quik Stop on Lower Main Street and managed Meserve's Restaurant on Main Street which was located in front of Hannaford as well as the now defunct gas station also located in front of Hannaford.

Returning home to Gorham from college is just about the same as anyone would expect. You get off that plane, or you drive down that familiar road, with bags or car stuffed full, and finally return home to the family and your own bed. And the only thought on your mind: What a wonderful thing a pantry stuffed full of food is! You have your fill of food that you did not have to buy, you watch cable you did not have to pay for, and you sleep on sheets you did not have to wash. No early classes, no boring lectures, and no 100+ page required reading. At the end of your first day home, you go to sleep with that Louis Armstrong song playing in your head: "And I think to myself, what a wonderful world."

- Great advice from a learned student!
- What great witty words of wisdom! Thanks for sharing. And I'm glad to know you don't think of me as "evil"

NEWS FROM AUGUSTA

A Successful Session

he First Regular Session of the 124th Maine Legislature adjourned in the early morning hours of Saturday, June 13. Though weary from the long days, late nights, and countless hours of debate over the important issues facing our state, I could sense that my colleagues also felt positive about what we accomplished this session.

The remarkable efforts of the Appropriations Committee (which received significant help from the various policy committees) came to fruition in late May when we passed the two-year budget on an overwhelming bi-partisan vote. While we should be proud of our success, the moment was also bittersweet.

The fiscal reality facing the state forced us to make very difficult decisions—in order to balance the budget; we had to cut spending by approximately $500 million. This two-year budget is the first since 1974 that is smaller than the previous one. Many of these cuts were painful, but unfortunately they were necessary in order to bring us back on a solid economic footing.

We also passed a number of bills that pave the way for our future success. For example, the Legislature passed a Democratic proposal that cuts Maine's income tax, which brings us into the mainstream of income tax rates across the country and will be helpful in encouraging businesses to invest in the state. We also passed a comprehensive energy bill that establishes a strong foundation for securing an energy future by focusing on efficiency, renewable energy and economic development.

I was personally pleased that a number of my bills received strong

All told, despite the very difficult economic times, the Maine Legislature had a productive session. We cut spending and cut taxes. We took an important step towards energy security, and made progress towards lowering the cost of health care. Of course, our work is far from done; we still face many challenges. But I am encouraged, because Democrats and Republicans in the Legislature came together to make the difficult decisions necessary to move our state forward.

y mother had her own version of the aborigines "walkabout," a ritual where a young male roams the wilderness for up to six months and emerges a man.

In my family, the ritual occurred a few months before each of my siblings and I started kindergarten. My mother would walk us to the edge of South Street in front of our house, making sure we crossed the street safely. She'd give us a nickel and point us uptown toward the candy store. If we returned, we were mature enough to go to Kindergarten.

I clearly remember the day it was my turn. It was 1955 and I had just turned five. I crossed the road as if I were Bilbo Baggins leaving the Shire, looking left and right for cars and goblins. I wasn't afraid, well perhaps afraid of losing my nickel along the way, but that was about it. I clutched it tightly and counted the houses and driveways as I made my way to Mr. Turner's Five and Ten (where the Gorham Grind is today).

Let's see, four houses to the "big school," which was the high school then, now the Gorham Municipal Center. I would later spend fifth through eighth grade there. Then there was the library which I loved, with its stone cold floors, the perfect place to sit on a hot summer day. Next to the library was a yellow house with a white picket fence. No one seemed to live there. No one entered or left. When I got old enough to read, I discovered that the sign at the entrance read, James Phinney Baxter Museum. On several occasions I peeked in the windows noticing that each room was neat as a pin filled with feather beds and antique furniture. To me, it was simply a yellow house where no one lived.

There was one more house next to the museum and then the railroad bridge. We'd hear the trains as they chugged and whistled past Gorham Station (now Sebago Brewing Company). All too soon the trains would be gone leaving a filled in space where the bridge once arched.

A few more houses and I arrived in front of the Fire Station (located between the current Robie Gym and Amato's). I ran by quickly for fear a fire might break out and the big red trucks would burst through the doors, and besides, I was only a hundred feet from Mr. Turner's Five and Ten. I could already taste the candy. I knew from the beginning of my journey I was going to buy the chocolate covered sugar babies I loved so much.

Obviously, I made it home safely and started Kindergarten at Campus School on School Street. I still have the plaster of paris hand print I made in Mrs. Colpitts' Kindergarten class—a Mother's Day present for my mom in 1956.

Years later my husband and I moved to Connecticut. To my complete surprise, one of the first people we met had visited Gorham and had actually traveled four hours to visit the Baxter Museum. "Perhaps now that you live in Connecticut," he chuckled, "you'll visit the museum!"

Maybe Dorothy was right when she said, "If I ever go looking for my heart's desire again, I won't go looking any further than my own backyard, because if it isn't there, I never really lost it to begin with!" I haven't lived in Gorham for 40 years, but my heart still resides at 87 South Street, a house that is seven doors down from Gorham's only museum—James Phinney Baxter Museum—a place I plan to visit...someday.

Beverly Mann Lessard grew up on South Street and graduated from GHS in 1968. She has since written many short stories and anecdotes about her days in Gorham. She may be reached at burlylessard@aol.com

COLLECTOR'S CORNER

The Art of Collecting Star Autographs Marc Badeau

ollecting autographs—whether signed letters, documents, manuscripts, books, or photographs—has long been a collecting passion enjoyed by many. In today's world of fleeting electronic communication, these personal connections to the past offer the unique satisfaction of holding pieces of history, quite literally, in our hands. Autographs bring moments in time to life, often with incredible power. The window they open onto the past helps us better understand a person or event of importance to us. We define our present by examining its roots in the past, and autograph collectors preserve an important part of our heritage.

The least expensive entrance into this hobby can be through autographed

p U oo ti in si n oo p so y y ii

Clark Gable autograph valued at $4,500

Unfortunately, most of us do not have the opportunity to meet movie stars, sports figures, musicians, authors or high-ranking politicians in person. Chances are you won't bump into Brad Pitt or Figer Woods at your

Tiger Woods at your local grocery, but with a little time, effort, postage and patience, obtaining autographs can be fun and rewarding.

Because notable people receive hundreds of letters daily, keep the message concise. Even though it might seem necessary to indulge the stars with praise, you have little chance of receiving an autograph if they must read through pages of prose to find your request. Keep it short and to the point to increase your chances of having your request filled. Do whatever you can to make your request stand out. Type the words AUTOGRAPHED PHOTO in all caps, color them, circle them, enlarge them, or highlight them. Most famous personalities do not want to incur the cost of postage so include a selfaddressed stamped envelope.

Influential people are seldom in one place for very long. This is why it is necessary to keep a good eye on the world of entertainment and know a little about the person you are targeting. Two books that will help you reach the stars are The Address Book (by Michael Levine, Perigree Books/Putnam Publishing Group) and Star Guide (by Axiom Information Resources). These publications provide the most current mailing addresses of thousands of celebrities including authors, actors, sports figures, musicians, and politicians.

Purchasing autographs is also an option. With the proliferation of forgeries in the marketplace, here are several key guidelines that you should abide by when purchasing autographs:

- Buy autographs that capture your interest; avoid fads and autographs presented as "great" investments or sold through pressure tactics.
- Learn as much as you can about what makes an autograph authentic and important.
- Use common sense when buying an autograph. If a price seems too good to be true, it probably is.
- Buy only what you can afford.
- Buy only from reputable dealers such as Professional Autograph Dealers Association (PADA) members who can help you avoid risks and problems.

Many people find collecting autographs a rewarding and absorbing pastime. Franklin Delano Roosevelt often turned to his autograph collection as a distraction from the pressures of the presidency. Others find autographs a way to learn more about the people and circumstances that especially intrigue them. Whether you collect letters from political figures explaining their motivations, musical scores by great composers or pictures of famous actors with illuminating inscriptions, autographs offer valuable insights into the thoughts and aspirations of those who shaped history.

SMCC and Gorham Adult Ed Team Up

Southern Maine Community College and Gorham Adult Education are pleased to announce a new and convenient way to pursue a college education. This fall, two SMCC classes will be offered at Gorham High School. In recent years, SMCC has begun to offer classes in local communities in an effort to get more students to give college a try. This mission fits well with Gorham Adult Education's efforts to help adult education graduates transition to college. Presently Gorham Adult Education has about 12 students either enrolled at SMCC or entering in the fall. The following classes are scheduled in Gorham:

BUS 111; Financial Accounting, Wednesdays from 6-8:45 p.m. SOC 100; Introduction to Sociology, Mondays from 6-9:05 p.m.

To register, or for more information, call SMCC Enrollment Services 741—5800. For those who would love to go to college but are not sure they are ready, contact Gorham Adult Ed at 222-1095 to learn more about their college transition program.

Fendler Found at a School in Gorham

n June 3, the students in Mr. and Mrs. Small's classes enjoyed a visit with Donn Fendler. In 1939, at the age of 12, he was lost on Mount Katahdin for nine days and subsequently wrote a book about his experience. Earlier this year, the students read and listened to a tape recording of his book, Lost on a Mountain in Maine, and exchanged letters with Fendler before inviting him to the school for a visit. Today, Fendler lives in Tennessee during the year but spends his summers at his camp in Newport, Maine, which is about a two-hour drive from Gorham.

During his visit, Fendler recounted many of his experiences while he was lost. Interestingly enough, he said that he was really only lost on the mountain for one day because he had climbed off of the mountain after the first night and spent the next eight days lost in the surrounding woods. As a result, the search parties looking for him never came within 10 miles of him the entire time he was lost.

Fendler stated, "What a mistake that was," when on the night of July 17, he had chosen to leave Henry Condon, the son of a Maine guide, on the cold and rainy cloud-covered mountain to go back down the trail alone in search of his father and brother. After spending the first difficult night alone in the woods, Fendler said "something happened to me that first morning. That's when the cool head kicked in."

Throughout his ordeal, he remembered two things he had learned in Boy Scouts – "Keep your head and you'll come out all right," and "When lost, follow a stream down." Probably one of the lowest points was on about the fifth day when a plane flew overhead but couldn't see him because of all the trees. Fendler also told about meeting with two bears in the woods, and about how on the ninth day, he suddenly came to open water at the Lunksoos Camp on the East Branch River, where he was finally rescued.

Students learned that the first rule of wilderness survival is if you ever get lost, stay where you are and signal for help. Fendler said that if he had done that, he wouldn't be here speaking with us today as his rescue would have been quicker and his ordeal much less noteworthy. He also shared what he believes are the three most important things that have helped him in his life – prayer and belief in God (he had prayed every day while he had been lost), the love of family, and finally having the will to live.

Following his presentation, Fendler took the time to meet and talk with each student, as well as sign pictures and copies of his book. It was a very enjoyable visit and the Village students were lucky to have had the opportunity to meet him. We hope that he enjoys the summer at his Newport camp and catches lots of trout!

Village School Represents Gorham at Odyssey World Finals Marie Rowe

he Village School Odyssey of the Mind Balsa team made their "moving" appearance in the Division 1 Shockwaves Problem at the Odyssey World Finals in Ames, Iowa. Team members Avery Arena, Doris Beane, Keenan Kent, Alex Ousback, Will Perrin, Michelle Rowe, and Cody Swift, along with coaches Danielle Despins and Julie Perrin, and parents Kim Arena, Donna Beane, and Marie Rowe all attended the four-day tournament which was held at Iowa State University. The competition was fierce and the team placed 34th, but all were quite happy with the results as the children learned many things just by watching other teams perform.

Opening ceremonies for the event were much like that of the Olympics. Countries such as China, Singapore, Poland, Slovakia, and Germany, along with many representatives from the U.S., paraded in with their official state banners and made their way around the huge Hilton Coliseum to cheering team members and fans. There was also a float and banner parade in which Maine placed in the top 5.A creativity festival was a hot spot for the kids as they engaged in various games which were both educational and fun. Pin trading was one of the most exciting activities at the World Finals. Every team, whether foreign or U.S., got a set of pins that represented the theme of their country or state for that particular year. Children then approached each other and "bartered" to trade their state pins. It was an excellent way for the children to not only meet people from other states and countries, but to get a collection of souvenirs from many other places around the world.

All in all, the trip was a success and the experience will be treasured by all for many years to come!

HAVING MORE RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS IS NOT THE SAME AS HAVING MORE MONEY.

When it comes to the number of retirement accounts you have, the saying "more is better" is not necessarily true. In fact, if you hold multiple accounts with various brokers, it can be difficult to keep track of your investments and to see if you're moving toward your goals. At the very least, multiple accounts usually mean multiple fees.

- The Committee discussed Mr. Sharp's goals for the 2009-2010 year.
- The Committee voted (7-0) to terminate the mid-year kindergarten switch. The rationale behind the switch includes less disruption to work schedules for parents, staff and specialists and the lack of data proving that one session allows for greater achievement than the other. Each kindergarten session would share Early Release Days. The AM session would attend school on the first four early release days and the PM session would attend school in the morning on the last four early release days. Assignments for AM and PM sessions have not yet been made and will be based on geographical area of residence or daycare.

Ready To Move Right In!

In markets where sellers are looking for anything that will make their homes stand out from the crowd, some are choosing to $% \left\{ 1,2,\ldots ,n\right\}$ sell their homes fully furnished. So-called "turnkey" homes appeal to potential buyers who want to minimize the hassle of a move or negate the need to buy new furniture. Very often, these sales involve homes that have been lovingly decorated to the point where the furnishings are so much a part of the overall effect that buyers wish to preserve it by having the furniture included in the sale. From a seller's standpoint, this approach may make good sense for the person who is downsizing and does not need as much furniture for a smaller home.

Locating and moving into a new home requires several steps and important decisions. Some potential home buyers welcome the option of moving into a fully furnished home so they have one less thing to do. I provide sellers with knowledgeable, objective advice on pricing, market timing, and methods to help their home stand out from the crowd. Buyers, I can help you locate a home that fits your lifestyle, personal tastes, and budget. Browse www.olearysaxby.com to view homes now on the market. My office is located at 352 Main St.

Serving my clients with dignity and respect in a smaller, more personal environment.

When you've made the right decision, you know.

Even though we knew it was time, moving to an assisted living community was one of the hardest decisions we've ever had to make. But I knew we'd made the right choice when we decided to come here.

I never dreamed it would feel so much like home. And it's good to know we won't have to move again if our financial situation changes.

We looked at a lot of places. The moment we decided on the Inn at Village Square, we knew we'd made the right choice.
