Oil Spill Cleanup Ongoing Process

By Sheri Faber Staff Writer

On June 11th, a blue or black Honda CRV cut off an oil truck going through the rotary on Routes 114 and 112. The driver of the oil truck lost control of his vehicle while attempting to avoid hitting the Honda, and the truck overturned. When crews from the Gorham Fire, Police and Public Works Departments arrived at the scene, fuel was gushing from the truck, which contained 3,000 gallons of kerosene and 6,500 gallons of diesel fuel.

Gorham crews rushed to the scene with truckloads of sand to block the oil from spreading. Oil on the roundabout was covered in foam to ensure it did not ignite. Some of the spilled fuel was soaked up through absorbent pads and some evaporated.

Dams have been built on both sides of South Street to allow oil on the surface of the water to be recovered. According to the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), 8,845 gallons spilled from the truck and at least 7,500 have been recovered or have evaporated. 2,500 gallons were recovered at the dam while 4,000 gallons were recovered through the use of absorbent pads where the truck rolled over. 600 gallons remained inside the truck. Crews from Clean Harbors were instrumental in recovering much of the spilled oil.

The DEP does not believe there is any indication of contamination in the

Fernandes: Five Years for Sex Trafficking

By Sheri Faber Staff Writer

Klein Fernandes, 26, one of three Gorham residents arrested for participating in a sex trafficking operation, was sentenced to five years in prison for his role in these crimes. At the time of his arrest, Fernandes denied being a pimp, saying he did not beat the woman involved and was not making much money. He pled guilty to sex trafficking and aggravated assault. At the time of his arrest, he was on probation for an armed robbery charge and he was also sentenced for violating probation. His sister, Tamika Dias, has been indicted by the Grand Jury on sex trafficking charges. Her case is still pending.

Remembering Deputy Chief Michael Kucsma, Jr.

By Krista Nadeau Staff Writer

Exceptional. This is the one word those who knew Deputy Chief Michael Kucsma, Jr. use to describe him. "He was an exceptional firefighter, mentor, and leader; but beyond that, he was an exceptional human being, who had a passion for living life to its fullest in all areas," describes Lieutenant Gabe Cyr of Gorham's Engine 6.

"He was like a son," explains Chief Robert Lefebvre of the Gorham Fire Department. "One of the finest firefighters and leaders who I've had the privilege of knowing," he added.

Town Manager David Cole echoed a similar sentiment, "Mike was very professional and very good at the job he was doing in Gorham."

Deputy Chief Kucsma was one of the first live-in students in Gorham, coming to the Fire Department in 1991. He was promoted to deputy chief in 2006. He was also a captain with the Portland Fire Department. While Mike's love and commitment to the fire service was obvious, he had many other things that he loved, especially his wife Marcia. Chief Lefebvre describes Marcia as one of the strongest people he knows. Mike and Marcia enjoyed travelling and did so extensively. The couple met while members of the Gorham Fire Department. "I can truly say I don't know of another couple more suited to each other," added Chief Lefebyre

Kucsma is also described as a man who treated every one the same, regardless of their place in life. It was this attribute that enabled him to make friends so easily. The number of people his life touched is numerous. Chief Lefebvre estimated that about 800 people attended his service, where attendees were actually standing outside the church because inside was full to capacity.

Deputy Chief Kuscma leaves a legacy. In his eulogy, Chief Lefebvre charges all brothers and sisters of the Fire Service to continue to honor and pay tribute to him by doing exactly what Kucsma himself did: "Continue to learn, strive to be the best in everything you do, make sure you pass on your knowledge and skills to others, and to take pride and ownership in your departments and in everything you do."

Chief Lefebvre added, "Rest easy, my friend, we'll take it from here."

Gorham Grad Selected to National Field Hockey Team By Jeff Pike, Sports Editor

When Hannah Prince (GHS '10) signed on this spring as an assistant coach for the Bryant University women's field hockey team, she probably did not expect to resign within a few short weeks. But that's exactly what's about to happen, and Bryant University is giving her their complete approval!

Prince is leaving for a new full-time endeavor—having been selected to the US National Field Hockey Team. She and 29 other players were chosen for Team USA following a tryout of 125+ players at the Women's National Championships in June. Prince will report with the rest of the team July 14 to Lancaster, Pennsylvania to begin year-round training.

While there are 30 players on the team, the US carries only 16 to 18 players on its game rosters when traveling to international tournaments. The potential tournaments in which Prince may participate include the Olympics, scheduled for the summer of 2016 in Brazil.

Prince was with her parents Greg and Theresa as well as her college coach at the National Championships on June 21 when she "unofficially" received the news she had earned a spot on the team. "The official

Choosing Wisely: More Medicine is Not Always Better

By Rep. Linda Sanborn

With health care spending now accounting for 18 percent of the US gross domestic product, there is a growing movement urging physicians to be better stewards of medical resources. To help physicians become more cost-conscious in their day-to-day decision making, much work is being done to educate practicing physicians, residents and medical students on how to integrate cost considerations into every day care.

But this is not an issue for medical providers alone. It is imperative that health care providers and patients work together and have conversations about wise treatment decisions. We must choose care that is supported by evidence showing that it works: is not duplicative of other tests or procedures already received; won't cause harm; and is truly necessary. Some experts believe as much as 30 percent of care delivered is duplicative or unnecessary and may not improve people's health. Our current heath care system contains much waste.

The American Board of Internal Medicine Foundation's Choosing Wisely campaign is an initiative to help providers and patients engage in conversations about the overuse of tests and procedures. The campaign supports efforts to help patients make smart and effective care choices.

In Maine, Maine Quality Counts (MQC) has partnered with five regional Area Agencies on Aging and the Maine Health Management Coalition, which represents employers/employees, to raise awareness around the Choosing Wisely campaign. MQC is focusing on educating the public by partnering with consumer and employer subcontractors, as well as professional health care organizations to disseminate Choosing Wisely information and highlight tests and treatments that should be questioned.

Each participating specialty society has created lists of "Five Things Physicians and Patients Should Question." They provide specific, evidence-based recommendations medical providers and patients should discuss to make wise decisions about the most appropriate care based on their individual situations. Consumer Reports is developing patient-friendly materials and is working with consumer groups to disseminate them widely.

For instance, here is Consumer Reports' "Top Five When to Say Whoa!" list:

- EKGs and exercise stress testing for patients without heart disease.
 - Imaging tests for lower back pain.
- CT scans and MRI's for uncomplicated headache.
- Bone density scans for low-risk
 - Antibiotics for sinusitis.

Choosing Wisely encourages patients to ask these five questions before you get any test, treatment or procedure: Do I really need this test or procedure? What are the risks? Are there simpler, safer options? What happens if I don't do anything? How much will it cost?

Don Berwick, CEO of the Institute for Healthcare Improvement has said, "Choosing Wisely is a game-changer. The advice comes not from payers or politics, but from physician groups [that] are not guessing; their lists of procedures contain copious scientific citations supporting the claims of overuse."

I often hear concerns about an individual's responsibility for their own health care. By supporting the patientprovider relationship in the Choosing Wisely campaign, we are indeed asking patients to "take charge of your health" and encourage a fair distribution of finite resources, rather than

Dear Gorham Times Editor:

During two recent U12 baseball games at Robie Field, I witnessed some appalling behavior from coaches and, to a lesser degree, a few players and fans. This behavior was directed at the umpires the league employs, most of whom are GHS students.

When the "adults" on the field are out of control, who will stand up and support young adult umpires? When a coach refuses to follow the directions of an umpire or bullies with such disrespect and physicality that umpires do not feel entirely safe, what does it teach young players? GYBSA describes these instances as "minor not so satisfying events." It is obvious the problem is not understood or taken seriously.

After game two, Chuck Nadeau, the GHS varsity baseball coach, introduced himself to my 18-year-old son, who has been an umpire for five years. He shook hands and said, "The problem isn't you, it's them. The outcome was in NO way affected and that is what an umpire strives for." Thank you, Coach Nadeau, for being a positive influence to young players

Every student in Gorham knows what the "Code of Conduct" is. If you are a coach in Gorham, read it! As a coach, you are entrusted with our children to be a teacher and role model. NOT a threat or a bully.

Parents, you know who these coaches are. Stand up for your youth players and umpires by reminding the bad coaches and league officials they should set the example by adhering to the highest standards of behavior. Bullying is not tolerated in the schools, why do we tolerate it in youth sports?

I suggest the GYBSA come up with a Coaching Code of Conduct and use it to hold coaches accountable for poor behavior on the field.

Gorham-Based Ghost Hunters Haunt ME

By Robin Somes Staff Writer

There is a team of sleuths in Maine who research and investigate the possible paranormal aspects of locales throughout the state, and the public can partake in these exploits through a web series called "Haunt ME." The show is available through Entertainment Experiment, a website that showcases the series created in Maine.

Creator, director and host Ashley Brooks (GHS '05) initiated the effort of acting on a curious interest she shared with friends and coordinated what would become the first season of the show. Along with audio analyst Ty Gowen (GHS '05), visual evidence analyst Shawn Ruarke, occultist Katie Webb, historian Carol Cleveland and technical crew, Brooks guides each of the episodes. Nick Nordfors (GHS '05), a script coordinator whose professional commitments often take him to New York City and Los Angeles, serves as producer. With a variety of talents, initiative and a common cause, "Haunt ME" premiered November 2012.

Not unlike television series like "Ghost Hunters" and "Ghost Adventures," an episode of "Haunt ME" entails a visit to a location with a reputation for being haunted, a review of the location's history and a subsequent investigation armed with an array of specialized devices that might detect the presence of one or more spirits. However, "Haunt ME" has a very significant advantage: the locations are all in Maine, with most of them being places anyone can visit. This is not to imply that a ghostly encounter will be experienced during a visit, but being at a place that you watched being investigated on "Haunt ME" ensures an enhanced and eerie sense of the location's history.

Another unique aspect to this series is a rating the team gives to a location that has been investigated. The team developed the system comprised of five classifications that correspond to numeric ratings. Frith, an Old English word meaning "safe," corresponds to a rating range from one to three; a rating between four and five corresponds to Obstreperous, "mischievous;" six to seven corresponds to Andgiete, "understanding;" eight to nine corresponds to Bellicose, "aggression;" and 10 corresponds to Blodreow, "blood thirsty." A pre-rating is determined based on a location's reputation and history of being haunted. The team assigns a second rating after completion of its investigation, analysis and discussion. Then a final rating is determined based on an average of the two ratings.

TAKING A SHORT BREAK

The staff and volunteers of the Gorham Times will be taking a well-deserved short summer break. Our next edition will be on newsstands on July 31.

Final ratings have ranged from 2.5, Frith, to 7.0, Andgiete, assigned in the "Two of Swords (the farm)" episode.

The first episode of season one, "Ace of Wands, (the training episode)," provides an insightful background of the team, an explanation of the rating system and the equipment used, and it documents their first experience together performing an investigation. In other season one episodes, the team evolves and applies what was learned in former episodes to subsequent investigations.

And yes, there are genuinely spooky moments captured on video. In "Three of Pentacles (The Church)," the sound equipment used in filming team members as they ascend a staircase picks up an otherworldly voice clearly saying "hello"-twice. However, none of the team members notice what the audience hears. In "Six of Swords (Fort Knox)," a young spirit interacts with the team, and responds to specific requests. The flashlight that no one was holding lights up on its own during the investigation in "The Hierophant (Masonic Temple)".

In its short existence, the show has evolved significantly. "There is a big difference between season one and season two," stated Gowen. He went on to explain, "Production values are much better because of new equipment. Story lines have improved, and the show format changed and got better." It is interesting to see the development between the first season and this year. In the initial episodes, it is evident that a dedicated group came up with a thoughtful, informative and smartly assembled set of shows. In season two, it is evident that a higher level of overall quality was achieved. The production values are noticeably better: the quality of the camera work incorporates shots that are richer, with a nice balance of moving and still shots, narratives are more informative, particularly in regards to the history of the locales, and the story lines now make for a more compelling experience. As Brooks commented, "We've really come into our own with season two."

The episodes for season two were completed last year. The troop is readying for season three, where the show will continue to evolve thanks to additional equipment and a format that will showcase each of the investigators hosting the show to add a more personable touch, enabling viewers to better know

Dexter Jenks and the South Street Band

By Dana Redmond Spire 29 on the Square

Dexter Jenks graduated from Gorham High School in 2008 and is remembered by his music teacher as being "full of life." During his sophomore year he received a ukulele for Christmas and fell in love with it. "I liked that we couldn't find a teacher, so that meant no homework," Jenks laughed. "I really dove into music in my junior year and started writing poetry," he continued.

After meeting a friend he trusted enough to share his verses, Jenks started singing, strumming to a few chords and soon realized they had written a song. They rearranged chords, changed lyrics, and more music took off from there.

After high school, while studying at the College of Charleston, Jenks worked at a sandwich shop to make some extra money. His boss heard him singing while washing dishes and paired him up with a guitarist, JR Spencer, who was looking to start a band. They added drummer Sam Roberts and another friend from choir, John Barry, on bass, and South Street band was born.

Combining their diverse musical backgrounds created an original sound described as a high energy, intense mixture of rock, funk and reggae that appeals to music lovers of all ages.

Amanda Muirhead of The Music Initiative said. "The band as a whole is definitely magnetic... They like to have fun on the stage-but their music is no joke, they really get the crowd going."

Fast forward four years later and Jenks is returning to Gorham, not only to visit friends and family, but also to kick off South Street's national tour that includes the Virgin Islands.

On Thursday, July 10, South Street will play at Spire 29 on the Square, starting at 8 p.m. For more information on buying tickets, call 222-2068 or visit www.spire29.com. Follow South Street on Facebook at https:// www.facebook.com/southst. "Late For Tomorrow," their first full-length album is now available on iTunes.

When the Foot Hits the Ground

BY MIKE SMITH

For most of us, the good weather of spring and summer usually means increased activity and more time on our feet. Whether it is running or jogging, hiking or yard work, this time of the year usually means more time doing the outside activities we craved in the winter. We throw on our old sneakers, work boots or hiking boots and get busy. Often within a couple of weeks, some aches and pains begin, and we wonder what may have caused these nagging injuries. Many times the problem is something we had the previous year and had forgotten about. The often-overlooked cause of the issue is our own two feet and what new pressure we are putting on them. I remember learning in a course pertaining to the foot and ankle that when the foot hits the ground, everything changes."

In over 20 years of treating patients, I pay attention to the feet and what people put on them when dealing with nagging chronic issues like back, knee and hip pain. Many orthopedic problems are mechanical in nature. It is how we move throughout the day that causes many issues. When our feet are not giving us the support we need, stress to the knees, hips and back can occur. Throughout a lifetime, the feet take an awful lot of abuse and this stress works itself up the kinetic chain.

No two sets of feet are alike and any type of foot can sustain common diagnoses like plantar fasciitis and Achilles tendonitis. Many times these problems occur because of improper shoe or sneaker fit or footwear that has simply worn out. The shoes or sneakers you wear the most will often only last a year, at most. Folks who stand on concrete and tile floors for work are very susceptible to these kinds of problems and proper footwear is paramount in reducing stress to the lower body.

Physical therapy often will reduce the pain and symptoms, but good footwear is needed to keep these injuries from becoming chronic. Buying shoes and sneakers is like getting a new mattress. You need to try on several to get the right fit and feel, and the ones with the prettiest colors or the least expensive pair usually do not do the job well. Running shoes, although they are not for every occasion, actually provide the best option for proper fit as the industry spends a lot of money on the technology of running shoes. There are many brands, but it is the type or model of a particular brand that is going to fit properly and make the difference. I often prescribe inserts as well, as they can be customized to fit most shoes or sneakers while giving proper support.

Enjoy the nice weather and remember to be kind to your feet.

Mike Smith is a physical therapist and athletic trainer and owner of Village Physical Therapy on Main Street in Gorham.

The Centre of Movement Update

By Krista Nadeau Staff Writer

The Centre of Movement, owned and operated by Vicky Lloyd is celebrating its 35th anniversary. Thirty-five years is a long time. One can only imagine the number of children and adults who have learned to dance there.

The building, of course, has been around a lot longer than that, having once been the Grange Hall, then a flea market, before becoming the Centre of Movement. Times have changed, new laws and new ordinances are now in place and need to be adhered to, and, as Lloyd was told, there is no grandfathering for the things that need updating in her building.

Lloyd has been working with the Gorham Fire Department, the State Fire Marshal's Office, the State Electrical Office, and Gorham Code Enforcement regarding the violations they found at the Centre of Movement. Some items have been partially fixed or are in the process of getting done, however many remain not done and are past due, per their agreement. Chief Lefebvre indicated they are willing to work with Lloyd providing that she is working to bring her building

Because the Centre of Movement, located at 19 State Street, is deemed a place of assembly it requires the installation of a sprinkler system and an alarm system that is directly connected to the police station. Lloyd received estimates in excess of $80,000 to have these items installed. She said this would be a challenge to fund as neither she nor the Centre of Movement can afford this. "It's about people's safety," relayed Chief Lefebvre.

Lloyd is researching all possible options in order to try to fund the work needed to bring the Centre of Movement

Public Safety Complex

By Krista Nadeau Staff Writer

The Gorham Town Council met on June 17 for a special meeting. One of the topics of discussion was the Public Safety Complex project. Andy Hyland of Port City Architecture presented the proposed project. The complex would be located at 270 Main Street, the current and preferred location per previous feedback from the citizens of Gorham.

Town Manager David Cole said this project has been in the works since 1999. He added that there has been extensive work done to develop this project over a long period of time. Port City Architecture has had plenty of experience in planning a project like this one having done police stations for Falmouth, Old Orchard Beach, Waterville, and Sanford, and fire stations for Falmouth and Saco. The design of the proposed complex is very practical, stated Chief Robert Lefebvre of the Gorham Fire Department. "The design makes the station functional, not only for today, but also for the next twenty years."

The new fire and rescue building would address many of the issues with the current facility, including the need for separate facilities for male and female firefighters. The proposed complex provides nine separate bunkrooms and separate bathroom facilities. There would also be a training room and an emergency operations room. The new training room would be big enough and equipped to have classes with a seating capacity of 60 to 65. Should Gorham face any significant emergency, the Emergency Operations Center (EOC) would be the hub for monitoring the situation. The EOC would be fully equipped with multiple phone lines, several radios, computers, and large screen televisions. The project proposal can be seen at the Town Clerk's office.

Town Manager David Cole reported the estimated cost is $1.3 million less than the estimate that previously went out to voters. He expects the project cost to be approximately $5 million, or just under that. The Town Council will vote on the Public Safety project on August 5, 2014. Provided that the Town Council will approve the proposal, it is expected to go to referendum in November.

Settlement reached on Phinney Street Extension

By Sheri Faber Staff Writer

Patrick and Susan Smith, along with Paul Smith, initiated a lawsuit against the town over the status of Phinney Street Extension. Travis Caruso, owner of property at 53 Phinney Street, and also a party in this lawsuit, reached a settlement with the Smiths and the town. Caruso will not be accessing a 171-acre parcel adjacent to Phinney St. through Phinney St. Extension.

One issue raised in the lawsuit was whether Phinney Street Extension, which served two lots at the end of Phinney St., was a town road. The town has maintained this road for a number of years, but as part of the settlement agreement, the town will no longer maintain it as it is no longer a town road. According to the settlement, the Smith families, owners of a well drilling and a construction business on the Extension, will be permitted to continue to operate even though they will no longer be on a public road.

All parties, including the town, have dismissed all their claims as part of the settlement agreement.

Caruso's 171-acre property is also accessible from Rt.114. Caruso still wants permission to build a road through his existing lot on Phinney Street, which would provide access to the large parcel formerly owned by the late Norman Martin. C & C Family LLC now owns this property. Caruso had told Phinney Street residents he wanted to access this property to build up to five houses for family members and did not intend to make it a subdivision. The Caruso family had previously attempted to access this parcel from Phinney Street. In 2000, Travis Caruso's father, Alan, had sought permission to access the former Martin property from Phinney Street but permission was denied.

A second suit on whether the lots on Phinney St. can be subdivided is still pending. According to the bylaws of the original subdivision, Fort Hill Estates, lots on Phinney Street cannot be subdivided. The original developer did reconfigure two of the lots in 1980 so an existing pond would be entirely on one lot.

announcement was made a few days later, but the coach came up to me while I was watching the final game," Prince said. "I had no idea what he was going to say but was so excited when he told me I had a spot and would be an important part of the team. It's something I've dreamed of for a long time, so keeping quiet until the official announcement was very difficult!"

Chosen as the Miss Maine Field Hockey Player of the Year following her senior year in high school, Prince was also a standout player as a defender for the University of Massachusetts. In the summer of 2013, she played for US U-21 National Field Hockey Team that competed in the Junior World Cup in Germany.

"I gained a lot of confidence last year making that US U-21 team and decided that making Team USA one of my goals after graduating this year from UMass," Prince says. "I felt I played strong at the tryouts and received a lot of praise from the coaches, but there were a lot of great defenders, so the competition was tough. I think it helped that I also got some play at the midfield position."

Since the announcement, Price has received hundreds of congratulations through e-mails, text messages, phone calls and social media. "The support from everyone back home in Maine has been amazing," Prince says. "I really appreciate how happy they are for me!"

And Gorham appreciates the honor of having one of its very own succeed in athletics at such a high level. We will keep our fingers crossed that the Olympics in 2016 just might be a lot more special to our town!

DARE Graduates Learn to be Brave

By Mark Sanborn

On June 9, Gorham's entire fifth grade class held its graduation for DARE.

The guest speaker was Nicholas Reynolds, creator of the Boston Strong T-shirts to help the victims of the Boston Marathon bombings. Reynolds is a former Gorham High School and DARE graduate.

Reynolds associated the DARE decisionmaking model (Define, Assess, Respond, and Evaluate) when he was faced with the decision to help others. He also tied in the Code of Conduct model for our schools (Responsibility, Respect, Courage, Honesty and Compassion) exemplifying real life examples of what was discussed in DARE.

Great Falls School presented short skits dealing with solving risky situations and demonstrating how to get the proper help needed in risky situations.

Narragansett School created and displayed computerized posters demonstrating the skills learned in DARE.

Village School created and presented a poetry video about the importance of making safe and responsible choices.

The entire fifth grade ended the evening's event by singing along to the song "Brave" by Sara Bareilles, which is about being brave and having courage to speak up.

Gorham School Committee Meeting

By Robin Somes Staff Writer

In the last meeting for the 2013-2014 school year, Village Elementary School Principal Brian Porter provided a presentation on school assessment, a formal endeavor that incorporates numerous testing methods to ascertain information on scholastic oriented rankings, expectations and accountability at national, state, local and student levels. As his presentation revealed, a lot of testing, analysis and application is happening in Gorham's schools to provide a clear picture of where things stand academically.

The statewide MEA (Maine Educational Assessments) science oriented test is given each May to grades five through eight. MEA has been used by the state to track Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) at federal, state and local levels as part of the No Child Left Behind (NCLB) Act.

The NECAP (New England Comprehensive Assessment Program) is another tool used for requirements of NCLB. Like the MEA, it is given to students in grades five through eight and is administered every October. Testing covers reading and math and is based upon the prior year's instruction for all students.

The MHSA (Maine High School Assessment) is what the state uses to measure high school rankings in terms of student achievement. It is comprised of results from the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and science testing for grade 11 only. Specifically, the critical reading, writing and math sections of the SAT exam in May and the Maine High School Science Assessment given in late March/early April each year are used.

Every two years, the NAEP (National Assessment of Educational Progress) is administered to randomly selected students at various statewide schools for grades four, eight and 11. Testing covers areas of reading, math and science. Scoring is used for ranking at the state level and does not reflect student, school or regional levels.

As Porter explained, there are two main factors that drive the need for accountability: the AYP and the Gorham School District's self-imposed 90% Goal. AYP is federally mandated and stems from the No Child Left Behind Act. It represents the degree of academic progress expected of each school each year. However, states determine how this will be measured and, for the past several years, NECAP has been used in Maine. AYP is comprised of the reading and math testing from NECAP for grades three through eight and the SAT for grade 11.

Gorham schools have fallen short in recent years with respect to AYP, but Maine was granted a waiver that maintains targets at achievement levels from three years ago. As part of this waiver, Maine is implementing its own plan to improve educational results for all students through the Common Core State Standards, which will be implemented this coming school year. New educator evaluation and support systems will begin their pilot runs with full implementations by the 2015-2016 school year.

The 90% Goal was set eight years ago after discussions about doing much better in regards to competency in Reading and Math. It represents a level of 90% of students being proficient in these areas as reflected by NECAP. Overall, scores in Gorham have consistently risen since the onset of the Goal and in addition, have been higher than the state average.

As Porter pointed out, "All the efforts towards testing are interconnected. Although there may be parts of the connections that have attributes to other factors, clearly there's been an impact in having these programs. Teachers and staff really dig down to the fine details to find different ways to help students do better."

BY DIANE KNOTT Odyssey of the Mind Coordinator, Gorham Schools

As first place winners at Odyssey of the Mind Regional and State Tournaments in March, the Gorham High School's Classical Performance team earned an invitation to compete in the 2014 World Finals Competition.

After the regional competition, the team worked diligently to perfect their skit and raised funds to travel to Iowa State University on May 28 to join hundreds of other teams from countries such as China, Germany, and Canada.

Although they were not in range to bring home a trophy to Gorham, they did learn a lot from other teams competing at the global level. They also returned with fond memories of being American cultural hosts to their Hong Kong buddy team.

Odyssey of the Mind encourages students to think creatively to solve problems. It is an international educational program that provides an opportunity for students to work on a team, apply their talents, and solve problems. Students are required to keep their expenses within a budget and to do all work without assistance.

WRCV Student of the Quarter

Each guarter, teachers at Westbrook Regional Vocational Center (WRVC) select one student as Student of the Quarter for each program. Their selections are based on the student's academic performance and work ethic. Students are recognized at a breakfast awards ceremony at the Center, and parents, teachers, and school administrators are invited. For the third quarter, Gorham High School senior Tim Meuse was selected by his teacher, Chef Charles Limoggio, as the Student of the Quarter for the Culinary Arts Program. In the fall, Meuse will continue his studies in culinary arts at Southern

Encouraging Summer Reading

By Jacquie Lortie Village School Literacy Specialist

The Village School Reading Room was granted $700 by the Gorham Educational Foundation (GEF) to fund a research-based program to deter summer regression in reading skills. Research shows that children who read during the summer are at less risk for losing reading skills during the summer months.

On May 13, second through fifth grade students who received reading support, and their families, attended a pizza dinner and book fair.

After perusing books at their reading levels, the students made wish lists of books they would like to read during the summer.

Using the GEF grant, each child will receive $23 worth of books from their wish lists. These books were ordered and distributed before the end of the school year.

Students will be contacted during the summer and asked to share information and recommendations about the books they have read. By keeping their reading skills sharp, there should be little regression in reading scores when they return to school in September.

The Village School Reading Room thanks the Gorham Educational Foundation for their dedication to the students and teachers in Gorham.

GHS Student Wins MECA Scholarship for Essay

By Megan Dunlap GHS Student Intern

Maine College of Art (MECA) recently held its inaugural student essay contest to both high school and middle school students. The contest was designed to foster a discussion of art within Maine's young people.

The winning essay had the most "conviction and clarity of expression" to the questions: "What would a summer of making art at MECA mean to you?" and "How do you feel this experience would benefit your creative growth?"

After receiving dozens of essays from around the state, one of the two winners chosen was 15-yearold Caitlyn Duffy, a sophomore at Gorham High School. For being a finalist Duffy received a full summer camp scholarship at MECA.

Duffy said she almost did not enter her essay but is unbelievably happy that she ended up doing so. "It's such an amazing privilege to have access to so much creative energy over the summer," said

Narragansett to Combine Fourth, Fifth Grade Classrooms in the Fall

By Corinne Altham Staff Writer

On June 2, Gorham elementary school principals held two information sessions to discuss the move to state-mandated proficiency-based education with over 70 parents of K-5 students in attendance.

They outlined the national move to Common Core State Standards, broke down the Maine proficiency-based education law, discussed what's next for Gorham in the K-5 buildings, and took questions from parents.

In 2012, Governor LePage signed into law LD-1422 which would require school districts to create a plan toward awarding proficiency-based diplomas. Beginning with the class of 2018, schools must provide evidence that students are proficient

GFP Summer Update

Gorham Food Pantry volunteers, Paula Nystrom & Elizabeth Tanguay, accept fresh fruits and vegetables from the Gorham Middle School garden. Local gardeners are encouraged to share their summer harvest with GFP clients by dropping off produce on Wednesdays from 6 to 7 p.m. at the Pantry.

BY DIANE O'NEIL

Local gardeners are now harvesting early summer fruits and vegetables and many are sharing their fresh produce with the Gorham Food Pantry (GFP). Produce drop off hours at GFP are every Wednesday from 6 to 7 p.m. through the entire growing season (beginning July 2 through late-September). Last year, local gardeners donated over 500 pounds of fresh produce and these donations were greatly appreciated by Pantry clients.

GFP hours of operation are every Thursday from 9-11 a.m. and the second and fourth Wednesday of each month from 6 to 7 p.m. GFP is located at 299B Main Street, next to Saint Anne's Church. Some Potholes!

Officer stopped vehicle on New Portland Road. Operator was not intoxicated; he was trying to negotiate the potholes in the middle of the road.

Hurricane Road caller reported someone had shot a bullet through the screen door on their porch. Caller has not used the porch since the fall and Officer did not think it was a direct shot at the residence.

Gray Road caller reported that a 9- or 10-yearold boy assaulted his brother with a baseball bat.

Suspicious person was reported on Fort Hill Road with three children in the vehicle. Driver had purchased flowers for two of the passengers whose mother was buried at that cemetery.

Officer identified subjects on Dingley Spring Road who were walking home as their driver was intoxicated.

Cressey Road caller received a call from someone who claimed to be from Sprint and that the complainant owed $600 but that they would settle for $300. Complainant did not send money but wanted the police department aware of the possible scam.

A subject was at the call box threatening to kill a town employee who he alleged was harassing his daughter. Dispatch advised that subject was being uncooperative.

Police were asked to attempt to locate a vehicle and using the last three numbers of the license plate. They were advised that a man who had fled his residence after the Fugitive Files aired was rumored to be in the vehicle.

Three boys were playing outside on Hemlock Drive. Two boys were 13 and 14 and one was seven years old. The seven year old made a comment about having a stick and the older boys chased after him. The mother of the seven-year-old tossed the boys bikes over an embankment because she was afraid they were going to come after her.

Officer checked on a pedestrian on Dow Road who said he had been kicked out of his house in Buxton. Officer gave him a ride to Westbrook.

Suspicious person was painting his car for Thursday Thunder at Beech Ridge Speedway.

Queen Street caller reported a man living in his car behind her house. Man had active warrants.

Elm Street caller stated she has an elderly customer who comes into the business and yells and gets upset. There may be some age-related issues. Suggested she call if customer shows up and there is an issue. She has already referred her to another insurance company.

Officer stopped a vehicle on South Street as driver was not wearing his seat belt. While speaking with dispatch, officer saw operator put on his seat belt. Driver had an outstanding warrant for failing to appear on a charge of allowing minors to consume alcohol.

Officer had woman move her vehicle from State Street to Cumberland Farms. Driver was lost. Officer added air to her tire for her. Her tire light went out but her engine light stayed on. Officer smelled anti-freeze and found a leak. Advised her to have her engine checked.

Officer responded to a Shirley Lane residence for an intoxicated male who had fallen down some stairs and landed on a beer bottle with his head.

Four men including two from Buxton, one from Westbrook and one from Huston Road were arrested for OUI.

A Forest Circle man was arrested for domestic violence assault.

in standards across eight disciplines: career and education development; English language arts; world languages; health, physical education and wellness; mathematics; science and technology; social studies; and visual and performing arts.

The law indicates there can be several pathways toward proof of proficiency in order to account for the differences among learners. Standards-based reporting isn't new to Gorham as the district has been using the Maine Learning Results for years to assess student mastery of skills.

But proficiency-based graduation isn't the only hot new topic in Gorham Schools. Spearheaded by the fourth and fifth grade team teachers at Narragansett, the school will shake things up in the upcoming school year.

To improve response to intervention (a.k.a. targeted support), the school will combine classes of fourth and fifth graders to facilitate groups of children getting exactly the help they need. Fourth and fifth grade students at Narragansett have always been in "one teacher" classrooms, but starting next year they will move during the school day. Students will begin their day in one of four mixed age classrooms then move to a new classroom for reading, math, and science instruction in groups built upon student skill level.

Technically titled "vertical teaming," classroom teachers will be able to focus their instruction and professional development on fewer disciplines since they will be teaching fewer subjects to more children. Teachers Renate Schultz and Susan Adolf, who attended the evening information session, are excited about the move and looking forward to getting started in the fall.

Great Falls principal, Jane Esty, supports Narragansett's reform comparing traditional grade-levels based on age to "artificial silos" of learning.

All three principals were excited to see how more personalized and targeted instruction would improve student achievement in the years to come. Narragansett has committed to a guaranteed two-year pilot of the new program.

This exciting move for teaching and learning at Narragansett comes on the heels of their recent Certificate of Achievement from the Department of Education after making impressive gains in math and reading proficiency.

On May 15, Commissioner Jim Rier and his team from the Department of Education visited classrooms at Narragansett to celebrate their achievement and recognize them for being one of the top 25 schools in growth for all students and in the top 25 for growth among struggling students.

At the end of the 2013-2014 school year, Narragansett earned an A in the 2014 Maine School Performance Grading System. Their previous grade was a C.

Information about proficiency-based learning in Maine can be found on the Department of Education's website via www.maine.gov/doe/.
