Possible Change to Voting Locations

KATHY CORBETT
Staff Writer

Voters living in North Gorham and White Rock will no longer need to drive as many as 12 miles to cast ballots on Election Day if a new polling place is approved by the Secretary of State’s office in Augusta.

The Town Council recently voted to divide Ward 1 into two wards, each with about 3,000 registered voters. If approved, beginning with the November election, the Little Falls Activity Center (formerly Little Falls School) would serve northeast Gorham. Southeast residents would continue to vote at the Middle School.

A motion to consider either Little Falls or Great Falls School was introduced at the May 5 meeting. School Committee chair Dennis Libby explained, however, that there would be no way to separate students from voters at Great Falls because the building has only one public entrance, designed to meet state security requirements. Despite some concerns about parking, the Council voted on June 2 to make Little Falls, where voters cast ballots in the past, a polling place once again. Many North Gorham residents voting at the Middle School on June 9 expressed their appreciation for the Council’s decision. Look to a future edition of the Gorham Times for further information.

GHS Senior Interns

On Sunday, June 7, the town of Gorham said goodbye to their 2015 high school seniors and hello to the newest high school graduates as they marched at Merrill Auditorium in Portland.

Junior marshals Emerson Fox and Lizzie Sullivan guided the seniors marching into the auditorium to “Pomp and Circumstance” as parents and relatives cheered proudly and excitedly.

Following the students were members of the Gorham Police Department, who presented the colors. Principal Chris Record began the ceremony with opening remarks. He spoke to the spirit and enthusiasm of the graduating class, as well as remembering those who could not be there on that day; in particular Branden Denis, a junior who tragically passed away during the school year. The GHS Chamber Singers, which included many seniors, followed with an impressive rendition of the national anthem.

The first speaker was class president Humza Kahn, who delivered an inspiring speech about how much Gorham High School changed his life. Originally from Pakistan, Khan shared how he used to struggle to speak English, but how certain teachers and classmates gave him the confidence to spread his wings, including his decision to run for class president.

He also thanked those who gave him unrelenting love and compassion during the past 10 years.

“Today we stand here as winners and are ready to leave Gorham and go out into the world. But these moments of triumph would not have been possible without two important things: love and compassion. Love and compassion that came from our family, our friends, and most importantly our teachers,” said Kahn.

He led the Class of 2015 with great confidence and respect. Khan then introduced the class salutatorian Ashley Woodbury, who spoke about taking risks and never being afraid to make mistakes.

“Class of 2015, if I could leave you with one piece of advice, it’s this: Don’t be afraid to make mistakes. Find out what you love through trial and error. Learn to fail and still make the best out of your experiences,” said Woodbury.

She also praised the class for their unity and camaraderie, a quality she thinks the class of 2015 embodied perfectly. Woodbury finished her speech by introducing the class valedictorian Doug Beahm, who captivated the audience by expressing gratitude toward not just his own family, but all the families that helped raised him.

“This village has raised this child. Of course, I’ve had my father, my mother, my brother, and my extended family. My appreciation for them is untold. The same goes for my many coaches and teachers. But sometimes a child needs a whole village. In these times of need, so many

The Gorham Times asked our three state legislators from Senate District Six, House District 129 and House District 130 to provide us with "News from Augusta." Contingency Plan

REP. LINDA SANBORN

The Affordable Care Act (ACA) has dramatically changed the nature of health insurance in our country and made it possible for millions of families to gain access to health care for the first time.

In Maine, 75,000 people are enrolled in a health plan purchased on the insurance marketplace through the ACA. Of these, the vast majority--89 percent--bought their coverage with the help of an advanced premium tax credit, also known as a subsidy, to make it affordable.

These subsidies significantly reduce the financial burden on Maine families, making it possible for them to keep visiting their doctors and getting the care they need. The average subsidy in Maine is $332. Without it, the cost of health insurance would simply be too high for many Mainers.

However, the fate of these subsidies--and the tens of thousands of Mainers who rely on them--is in question because of a pending U.S. Supreme Court case, King v. Burwell. The Supreme Court will decide whether federally facilitated exchanges can offer tax credits or whether they can only be offered through a state-based exchange.

Maine is using a federally facilitated exchange, so if the Supreme Court rules in favor of King and decides that federally facilitated marketplaces cannot offer the tax credits, nearly 67,000 Maine people are at risk of losing affordable health insurance.

This could be devastating not only to families who need to see their doctors but also to the health of our economy. Hospitals, health care providers, insurance companies and employers would all be destabilized by the loss of more than $250 million in federal funds. And for those who would still be able to pay their premiums--or are sick and have no choice--the cost of health insurance through the marketplace would skyrocket as membership dropped, making it more expensive for everyone.

To avoid this scenario, I sponsored a bill to protect the subsidies by establishing a state-run exchange for Maine if the federal government notifies the state that they will no longer be available. Maine would continue to use the federal healthcare.gov website and other technical functions of the federal exchange, but we would transition to a state-based insurance marketplace in order to protect this key component of the ACA and avoid unraveling the substantial progress that has been made towards a better, more affordable health care system.

Currently, the credits are available to those making between 100 and 400 percent of the federal poverty level. For a household of four, 100 percent of the federal poverty level is $23,850 and 400 percent is $95,400. Maine's population has lower annual incomes and high rates of self-employment, making it the ideal demographic to benefit from crucial subsidies.

The Supreme Court decision is expected in late June, which means it will not likely be decided before the Legislature adjourns. Therefore, it is imperative that the Legislature acts now to prevent chaos by putting a contingency plan in place.

My bill received strong bipartisan support and recently passed both the House and the Senate. Given the state's continued refusal to expand Medicaid, it is even more critical that we protect those who are at the cusp of losing access to life-saving health care.

Dear Gorham Times Editor:

I am sick and tired of out of state special interest groups trying to lie to Mainers. What Senator Amy Volk has proposed is not an extension of years in office, but a staggering of terms so we don't have to go through as many costly, irritating campaign cycles.

In fact, the information about Senator Volk's idea is easily available on the Maine Legislature's website. Her idea follows a model other states have undertaken in which lawmakers would serve two 2-year terms and one 4-year term, with the districts staggered for those terms.

If we get to skip even one election cycle of having our voicemails and mailboxes filled with unwanted solicitation, I'm happy. This out of state group can spend their money elsewhere, because they've done nothing but make me happier to have voted for Senator Volk!

Go Senator Volk's website. Read the full explanation of her proposal and then decide the merits of the proposal for yourself, not what someone from outside Maine has to say!

Dear Gorham Times Editor:

The morning commute out of Gorham is so congested. Despite the annoying line of slow-moving traffic, there is someone who puts a smile on my face. Driving along Old Portland Road, bus number 24 will often pull over allowing commuters to pass after the students are safely picked up from their bus stop. Instead of having to wait in a long caravan of commuters, the bus driver allows many cars to pass before pulling back into traffic. It is very nice to find people who care about others. Thank you very much for doing that; it is a nice treat along an otherwise congested commute.

Life Changing Event Turns Young Cardiac Patient into Health Crusader

JACKIE FRANCIS
Staff Writer

Scott Nevers, a 2004 graduate of Gorham High School and 2009 graduate of USM, remembers in astonishing detail the events that led to his cardiac arrest almost two years ago. Not because the specifics of his near-death event are vividly imprinted in his memory; on the contrary, Nevers has no memory of what happened to him the day he collapsed or, for that matter, for the entire week he was hospitalized. Family members and friends, EMT's and hospital reports along with graphic pictures of him lying in his hospital bed are his go-to sources for the particulars of that fateful day.

At the age of 27, Nevers experienced "sudden cardiac arrest" while playing in a men's league softball game in Biddeford on a record-breaking sweltering day in July.

"I'd played golf in the afternoon and was playing a double-header that evening," says Nevers, "and I collapsed after running to home-plate on somebody's double."

One of his teammates called 911 reporting that Nevers was having a seizure. Biddeford first responders arrived in five minutes and realized he was not having a seizure; he was in cardiac arrest.

"I was down for 40 minutes while first responders gave me CPR," explains Nevers, "and they used an AED (automated external defibrillator) on me 19 times to shock me."

The EMT's struggled to find a vein to insert an IV because his heart was not pumping blood properly. Instead they drilled into his shinbone to attach it. Once at the hospital, the defibrillator was used three more times.

Once stabilized, Nevers was put into a three-day induced coma to prevent brain damage. Upon awakening, an implantable cardioverter-defibrillator (ICD) was implanted into his chest capable of correcting most life-threatening cardiac arrhythmias.

Tall, lean and seemingly a picture of health, Nevers is as active today as he has ever been.

A year ago, Nevers co-founded Vacationland Distributors, a thriving beer and wine distributor that caters statewide to craft brewers, nano-breweries, and microbreweries. He is pleased to be able to offer his breweries short-term business contracts, rather than lifetime agreements that most distributors and breweries have due to franchise laws.

And even more recently, Nevers started his own medical supply business, specializing in AED's--the very device that saved his life. "I found my calling," says Nevers proudly, "and my passion is to get these devices in as many places as I can think of, like hotels, golf courses, recreational departments, campgrounds and athletic departments. To me, the more places that have AEDs, the better. The stats for Sudden Cardiac Arrest are scary, and if I can help sell a device that eventually saves someone's life, it will be worth every second."

He also calls himself a "poster-boy" for the American Heart Association as well as accepting public speaking engagements with just about any organization that asks. "I'll share my story with anyone if it means saving lives," says Nevers. "Luckily, I survived, and now I'm trying to help others."

For more information, Nevers' medical supply business can be found on Facebook at facebook.com/neversmedicalgroup, via email at scottnevers@gmail.com or by calling (207) 776-1579.

Maine Families Encouraged to Bring Back the Sunday Dinner

Efforts to Benefit Area Seniors and Meals on Wheels

GORHAM TIMES STAFF

Bill Jenks, owner of the Gorham-based Home Instead Senior Care (HISC), is on a mission to see more families share sit-down Sunday dinners with their senior loved ones. The reason? New research shows that 50 percent of 1,000 surveyed families living near senior relatives feel they do not share enough meals with older loved ones, losing an important family connection. "For seniors, it's not what's on their plate that matters most at mealtime--it's who is at the table with them," said Jenks, "When seniors share meals with a companion, they have a better mealtime experience -- both nutritionally and emotionally."

Almost 75 percent of the people surveyed said they only sit down for a family meal with senior loved ones for special occasions, events or holidays. They say a big part of the problem is time--both not having enough of it and conflicting schedules.

To encourage families to make time for these meals, the Home Instead Senior Care Foundation, an arm of the national HISC network, will donate one dollar to Meals on Wheels America (up to $20,000 total through July 31, 2015) for each person who commits to regularly scheduling family dinners on any night of the week at the website SundayDinnerPledge.com. Pledging to have a sit-down dinner once a month with loved ones will make it possible for other seniors to have a quality meal through the Meals on Wheels, a national organization supporting the more than 5,000 community-based senior nutrition programs across the country. Local Meals on Wheels help to alleviate senior hunger and isolation.

"We hope families will make the pledge to either revive or begin new mealtime traditions with their senior loved ones," Jenks said. "This small commitment can have a big impact on a senior's well-being."

To help families across the country host their own Sunday dinner, HISC has partnered with Food Network celebrity chef, author, and mother of four Melissa d'Arabian who has developed easy, nutritious recipes. Additional resources are also available which include tips for how to involve seniors in meal planning and preparation, pre- and post-dinner activities and meal plans for healthy, inexpensive meals that all generations can enjoy.

For these free resources and more information on how you can bring back the Sunday dinner and reconnect with your senior loved ones, visit www.SundayDinnerPledge.com or call Home Instead Senior Care at 839-0441.

walls and windows, mostly with a glad-to-see-you-go theme. After the building was beautified, the destruction began.

The mother of Jon Smith won the bid to break the first large front window. Smith, the owner of the property and of Great Falls Construction, watched as she smashed it with a brick on her first toss. After the windows were all broken, the rest of the destruction began.

From water balloons to golden sledgehammers, the building stood strong after about an hour. A tug of war took down a large section of the east side of the building. Other efforts, including using explosives and tow truck and fire truck pulls, were less successful.

At 4:45 p.m. the building, although badly damaged, still stood, defiant to the end. Not to be defeated, a standby excavator began work and by 5 p.m. the building was completely demolished to the cheers and applause of the gathered crowd.

Now that the site is clear, Smith's plan is to create a 6,000 square foot commercial building. Aroma Joe's and Subway are currently committed tenants, with an additional 3,000 square feet available.

Public Safety Building Update

PATRICK O'SHEA
Staff Writer

A need for more space for the police and fire departments, first identified in 1999, will finally be met later this month.

After voters rejected the June 2013 referendum to renovate the former Little Falls School into a new headquarters for the police and fire departments at a cost of $6.3 million, the Town Council came up with another plan.

Last November, registered Gorham Voters approved a capital expenditure not to exceed $4,990,000 to renovate, improve and equip the existing public safety building located at 270 Main Street and to construct and equip a new police station. The proposal is to renovate the existing public safety building, which the departments now share, into a fire station, and, in front of that, construct a new 10,000 square foot police station. A courtyard between the buildings will create a complex.

The Town Council will vote on the final construction contract on June 23, and there will be a groundbreaking ceremony on June 24 at 9 a.m. The project is expected to be completed by the spring of 2016.

Council Provides Funds for Police Canine

SHERI FABER
Staff Writer

In recent years, Gorham and Buxton have been the only municipalities in Greater Portland without a police dog. In fact, Gorham has been without a police dog since 2009. This year the Gorham Town Council approved funding of $21,000 to allow the Police Department to purchase and maintain a dog certified in tracking and drug work. Start up costs will include buying a trained dog at an approximate cost of $6,500, equipping a cruiser with appropriate transport for the dog, and choosing an officer to be the dog's handler. Interim Chief Sanborn noted that Gorham requested a trained dog to respond to specific incidents 48 times in the two previous years, but was only able to get a dog 11 of those times. The dogs are used to locate people reported missing (usually children and the elderly) and in suspected drug cases.

Gorham Equestrian Joins Century Club

Cindy Bishop of Gorham was inducted into a special group of senior dressage riders and horses on May 31 at Vienna Farm in Gorham. The ages of Cindy and her horse, Star, add up to 100 years, which qualified them to become members of The Dressage Foundation's Century Club. In addition to ages totaling 100 or more, horse and rider must perform a dressage test at a show scored by a judge. The Dressage Foundation provides a Century Club ribbon and wall plaque, and Bishop also received a gift certificate from O'Donal's Nursery in Gorham. Bishop started riding in her late 30s, taking dressage training at Vienna Farm with owner Tanya Rennie and trainer Amy Libby. Now 65-years-old, Bishop has been riding for 25 years. local families have given me their time and compassion," Beahm said, demonstrating truly how appreciative he was to live in such a communal town.

He left the podium asking everyone to celebrate not what he has done, but what the community has done for him and his fellow classmates.

To break up the speeches, a group of senior singers performed an original song called "The Tell-Tale Sign," written by Drew York, a member of the graduating class. The song featured solos by York, GraceAnn Burns, Sarah Logan, and Katherine Stickney.

Seniors John Ennis and GraceAnn Burns then introduced history teacher Scott Caulfield who was the guest speaker for the night. Caulfield metaphorically portrayed the journey students will undertake following graduation by using an allusion to highway line painting, explaining how even the smartest people make careless mistakes but learning from them, rather than getting frustrated, is what is important.

After the diplomas were handed out by Record, the class relaxed and joined together to sing their class song, "The Middle," by Jimmy Eat World. Each student had a bright smile on their face, as they celebrated their graduation and the beginning of their futures. The song ended with the ceremonial turning of the tassels conducted by the class officers Humza Khan, Megan Bennett, Emily Lewis, and Kiana Plumer, officially marking the transition from high school seniors to GHS alumni.

Record closed the night with a few last remarks, then finally the Class of 2015 left the auditorium to the fitting song "See You Again," by Wiz Khalifa. It was an emotional time, but exciting nonetheless. Congratulations, Class of 2015!

Gorham Adult Education 2015 Graduates

LISA DALRYMPLE

On the evening of June 4, Gorham Adult Education celebrated the graduation of their students. Family members and friends came out to support the hard work and accomplishments of these graduates.

Students participating in the ceremony were: Lauren Bray, Malakai Cawood, Savannah Frager, Danielle Jenness, Oliver Steele, and Krista Warren. Additional members of the class of 2015 included: Thomas Caiazzo, Michael Dorazio, Liam Little, and Duncan St.Louis-Farrelly.

Frager, Little, and St. Louis-Farrelly were recognized as having achieved high academic standing. They received scores of 15 or higher on four or more of their HiSET® tests (the high school equivalency test that replaced the GED). HiSET® has designated a score of 15 or higher as being college or career ready.

Kate Rotroff, director of Gorham Adult Education, gave the main address to the graduates. She emphasized the importance of finding a passion in life. She spoke about various life paths they may take and the experiences needed to find what "makes them want to get up each morning."

The two student speakers for the ceremony were Frager and Steele. Both spoke about the perseverance it took to continue their education and the pride they took in their achievements.

Frager urged the graduates to be proud of themselves and recognize the strength it took to get to this point. Steele thanked his family and friends for their support. He also spoke about the importance of receiving his diploma in setting an example for his children.

After the ceremony, family, friends, and staff celebrated with the graduates at a reception in their honor.

GHS Grad Selected as 2015 Graduate to Watch

Daniel Thompson, son of Lori Thompson and Dana Thompson, was selected by Gorham High School as one of the 2015 graduates to watch in the Maine Sunday Telegram. Daniel is legally blind but has used technological advances to overcome his vision deficits. He works part time at Amato's and took college-level courses at USM last summer. He plans to attend USM in the fall to study to be a clinical psychologist. Principal Chris Record, who recommended him, said, "Daniel was selected because he rose above his challenges to become an outstanding school citizen. He participated in a variety of extra-curricular activities, succeeded in the classroom, and added a great deal to the positive atmosphere of the school. His family should be very proud of him. Daniel made GHS a better place."

CONGRATULATIONS, GHS CLASS OF 2015!

The Project Graduation Committee would like to send their best wishes to the entire Gorham High School Class of 2015. The sincere thanks we have received from the kids for their Project Graduation night has made all the hard work well worth it!

BRIDGES program at
Gorham High School

The alternative education BRIDGES Program serves ninth graders at Gorham High School (GHS). This year the BRIDGES Program has taken on four new hands-on experiential programs, in addition to the more traditional, classroom-based instruction.

In the first quarter, the group took part in low and high rope courses at Camp Ketcha in Scarborough. Students participated in team building games and challenges that encouraged problem solving, communication, and working together.

In the second quarter, students engaged in an experiential science unit about water quality. Students learned about watersheds, runoff, and how different pollutants affect our water systems.

GHS Junior Mallory Campbell Wins Journalism Award

ELIZABETH KANE
GHS Student Intern

Gorham High School junior Mallory Campbell recently won a contest to participate in an all-expenses-paid journalism conference. Al Neuharth Free Spirit and Journalism Conference is a program for high school juniors interested in journalism careers. It is designed to promote the importance of free spirit and free speech. The conference, a week-long experience in Washington D.C., is attended by winners of a contest, one representative student per state.

A week before the deadline of the contest, a Maine representative was still in need.

Everyone in the Digital Journalism class taught by Will Sedlack submitted their applications, including Mallory Campbell. Other than examples of journalistic work, the contest required submitting two short essays answering the questions, "Why do you want to be a journalist?" and "What makes you a free spirit?"

"To be a journalist, is to be a seeker of the truth," Campbell says, in her essay 'Knowledge Not of the Book Source.' "To be a seeker of truth takes guts. I want to be a journalist because there's a world to explore."

Campbell says she did not always want to be a journalist. "I was fixated on being an EMT, but then I took classes for EMT basic and [with] the first picture I saw of a dead person, I immediately shut that down." Although it changed her plans, she states she always liked to write and taking Digital Journalism opened the possibility of being a journalist.

On the topic of the second essay, Campbell says, "I'm a free spirit because I want to see the world, I want to travel, I want to do different things. To be free, first you have to want to be free. You can't go around settling. To be free is to do so many different things and meet so many different people."

Living up to her hopes of traveling, Campbell will represent Maine in Washington DC for the June conference where she will join 50 other young writers in touring the city and learning from journalists currently in the field.

Six GHS Students Published after Contest

Seven Gorham High School (GHS) students were recently recognized for their literacy accomplishments. During the school year, students entered a writing contest held by The Telling Room, a nonprofit writing center in Portland. This year's contest, open to teens across the state, focused on the concept of water either literally or metaphorically. Out of over 130 submissions, six students from GHS were published in the anthology, "When the Sea Spoke." The students were honored at The Telling Room's Big Night, which happened to also be their tenth annual celebration and anthology release party. Lizzy Lemieux, a sophomore in Jeanne Zarrilli's class, won the grand prize--a feature in the May issue of Maine Magazine--and she also received a cash prize. Other GHS students honored with publication from Lucinda Stein's classes included seniors Meagan Thomsen and Madeleine Scholz-Lague and freshmen Isabelle Burke, Simeon Willey, and Rylie Wareham. this teen writing organization, visit www.tellingroom.org. Pictured are Willey, for his submission of "Down Deep," and Wareham for her submission of "Behind the Helm."

During the third quarter students went to Shawnee Peak in Bridgeton for downhill skiing and snowboarding. Students took lessons, stretched their comfort zones, and were exposed to one of Maine's best and healthiest outdoor winter activities.

Throughout the final quarter, students have been working with Rippleffect, a kayaking and adventure program based in Portland. The students are refreshing their skills and gaining confidence in working as a team and problem solving through group games and adventure challenges. They have also been exploring Maine's forts and islands including: Cow Island, Fort Gorges, and Fort Williams.

Most of the students in the BRIDGES program do not thrive in a traditional classroom environment. They all face different challenges, including: anxiety, depression, low grades, and difficult relationships at home and at school. The BRIDGES program provides these students with a different option in school. It provides them with a supportive environment that offers relationship-based non-traditional teaching and learning and gives these students a chance to be successful.

Gorham Taste Walk

KATI KING

The rain did not keep the crowds away from the Eighth Annual Gorham Taste Walk. The event began as a food, music, and art festival intended to provide the community with an on-foot experience of Gorham village.

Roughly 120 maps were sold and nearly 100 votes were cast in this year's downtown food tasting event. Sebago Brewing Company was announced the winner of the Golden Spoon at the Uptown Junk demolition party.

Changes to the Taste Walk this year included a sponsorship by the Gorham Business Exchange, and the addition of one new stop—MK Kitchen, which totaled 12 participating restaurants in all.

The event raised nearly $700 in map sales and donations. One hundred percent of the funds raised will go toward sending high school students to Young Life camp. Young Life is a Christian-based non-profit organization for high school students of any or no faith background, in which adult volunteers offer kids positive adult role models, life-giving ways to spend time and the chance to hear the basics of the Christian faith.

For more information about next year's Taste Walk, visit www.facebook.com/GorhamTasteWalk.
