A Visit to Baxter Museum with the Curiosity of a Child

The museum's Music Room features an antique piano, an Edison record player and a stained-glass fire screen.

Visitors to the Baxter House Museum can step back in time just by stepping over the threshold.

"We call the top step 'the confessional'" says tour guide Suzanne Ennis, "because many visitors arrive confessing that they've lived here for decades but have never been inside."

Ennis says she loves showing native Gorhamites and newcomers alike around the 1800s home, walking them through the town's founding in 1736 and up to the turn of the last century. Third graders from all over town may be the museum's most important visitors. They study the history of Gorham in their curriculum at Village, Narragansett and Great Falls schools.

"They arrive in May with answers as well as questions" says the tour guide, noting that some teachers even assign to students the roles of Gorham notables. "I'll mention Captain John Phinney, our town's founder, and students will point to a classmate and say, 'That's him!'"

In the War Room, named for a large painting of the Civil War Battle of Chancellorsville, a student is asked to hold up a canteen that was owned by William Strout, so the whole class can see it. One student asked whether the soldier from the 17th Maine Regiment survived the war. Ennis says she told him, "I'll find out, and every tour after this one will know because of you." Roughly two hundred students visit the Baxter House every year in a tradition that goes back for decades.

Visitors can see what the first records and record player looked like in the Music Room. Students in class tours who have taken piano lessons can even give an impromptu demonstration for their friends. The tour guide encourages the children to return over the summer and help her give the tour to their families. "We've already had a few students come back this summer" she said last week.

James Phinney Baxter donated his birthplace to the town in 1907, and it opened as a town history museum the following year. Because the Baxter family is so well known in Maine, there is also a bedroom dedicated to their history.

Volunteers at the museum have helped set up a new child's bedroom on the third floor, where classroom tours do not go. "It's a little too small for large groups," the tour guide says. She encourages students to satisfy their curiosity with a return visit.

Ennis says she may have hosted the museum's oldest visitor last month when a nonagenarian made his confession on the top step. "This gentleman is a delight and he was able to confirm some of our stories from his own childhood experience."

The Baxter House Museum is open Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. through August. Tours by appointment may be arranged through the Baxter Memorial Library.

Gorham Students Complete Construction Immersion Program

Kelli Deveaux, Staff Writer

This summer, 200 Maine high school students, 18 from a program in Gorham, will have much to share when answering, "How I Spent My Summer Vacation." For the third year, Gorham High School hosted one of 16 statewide Construction Immersion Programs, an innovative, four-week, hands-on pre-apprenticeship program offered in partnership with Maine Construction Academy (MCA), an education and workforce development operated by the Associated General Contractors of Maine (AGC-Maine).

Gorham resident Kelly Flagg is AGC-Maine's executive director. She shared how this program exemplifies what's possible when schools, industry leaders, and community partners collaborate to open doors for Maine youth and build a strong future workforce. This program includes both classroom learning and onsite experiences with five different companies, ensuring that students are both prepared for and exposed to the vast occupational opportunities in the construction industry.

Participants aged 16-20 are responsible for timely attendance Monday thru Friday, 8 am-2pm, during which they earn three nationally recognized credentials including worksite CPR and First Aid, OSHA 10, and National Center for Construction Education and Research (NCCER) Core. NCCER Core covers eight introductory industry units, including construction math, power and hand tools, and construction employability.

On the jobsite, students engage in hands-on experiences such as welding, operating an excavator, and learning to use a climbing system to scale a roof. They also interact with employees and leaders at each company, and learn about this industry as well as what to expect and consider related to salaries, benefits, and growth pathways.

This year the Gorham Program spent days at PC Construction and Great Falls Construction, both commercial builders; Wyman and Simpson, a transportation infrastructure company; Revision Energy; where they learned about solar and clean energy careers, and R.J. Grondin and Sons, a Gorham-based earthworks company.

Larry Grondin, president and 3rd generation owner of R.J. Grondin and Sons is one of the business leaders who took time out to meet with students from the program. Grondin says he

On July 23, eighteen Gorham or former Gorham students ages 16 to 20, graduated from a statewide construction immersion program. The program ran five days a week for four weeks during which time small groups of them completed small construction projects. As part of their ceremony they each received a tool kit containing basic tools that they would need in continuing their learning.

commits his 150-employee business to the program because it promotes the industry, but also because it helps young adults decide on a career. He noted that students are also learning important workplace expectations, such as timeliness, and the art of introducing and presenting oneself as a professional. His message to students? "If you show up with a great attitude and want to put the work in, you will do well and advance."

An additional contributor to the program, Bangor Savings Bank met with students to explain money management, budgeting, retirement planning and 401(K) accounts, breaking down benefits packages, as well as how employee-owned businesses might work.

NEWS FROM AUGUSTA

Policy on News from Augusta: The Gorham Times asked our three state legislators from Senate District 30, House District 108 and House District 109 to provide us with "News from Augusta." We publish their articles on a rotating basis. The submissions are devoted to updates of legislative and administrative news, proposed and passed bills and laws, and developments and events that are of interest and have an impact on Gorham residents. Moving The Needle To Make Maine More Affordable

By Rep. Ellie Sato

Last month, the Legislature concluded its work for the session and successfully passed a balanced budget that helps working families across the state. We have done a lot of good for Maine people, from funding an increased child tax credit to put money back into the pockets of young families and investing in our child care and direct care workers who support aging Mainers, to measures that reduce costs for first-time homebuyers and increase protections for mobile home park tenants. I also had the opportunity to sponsor successful legislation to support survivors of sexual assault this year.

Whether you're a working family facing skyrocketing child care costs or have a partner who stepped out of the workforce to care for your children, too many families are struggling with the lack of affordable child care. This year, we passed and funded legislation that doubles Maine's Child Tax Credit to $600 per child for children under six, for families earning under $150,000 per year. Additionally, the Legislature rejected proposed child care cuts and instead invested in our care workforce and families. We passed measures that expand access to child care, particularly in rural areas, and provide a cost of living adjustment for our essential direct care workers who help our increasing population of older Mainers.

This session, we also worked to address the high cost of living by continuing to confront the housing crisis. We passed legislation to support first-time homebuyers by eliminating the transfer tax on their home purchase as well as additional protections for residents of mobile home parks, which are an important affordable housing option for Mainers on fixed incomes and affects our neighbors here in Gorham at Friendly Village. These measures include requiring mobile home park owners to give residents 90-day notice of any rent or fee increase, expanding rent-to-own protections and creating a right of first refusal for resident cooperatives to match a third-party offer to purchase the park they live in. Lastly, we also established a statewide property tax relief task force, which will help us fix the burden of high property taxes in future legislation.

As mentioned previously, I was also honored to have sponsored successful legislation to support survivors of sexual assault this session. LD 412 prohibits the sale of self-administered sexual assault forensic evidence (SAFE) kits, which are advertised as "evidence kits" to increase access to justice for survivors. However, they are unlikely to be admissible in criminal proceedings, and only further isolate survivors from critical care provided at medical facilities — evidence collection is just one of many time-sensitive services. Furthermore, state kits are already free for survivors because they are covered under the Victim's Compensation Act.

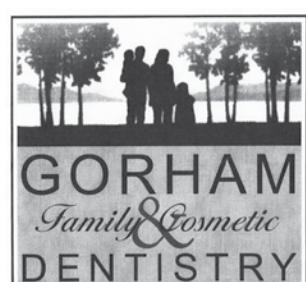

Despite these wins, we have a lot of work ahead of us to continue improving Mainers' quality of life. In the next legislative session, we will have to address many of the federal funding challenges resulting from President Trump and the Congressional Republicans' agenda to provide the ultra-wealthy additional tax breaks at the expense of everyday Americans. Maine people deserve a government that works for them, through maintaining health care access, emergency storm preparedness and a reasonable cost of living. We will work hard in the interim and through the next legislative session to continue to preserve and improve on these policies.

I encourage you to reach out to me any time with concerns about issues you care about, questions on policy or legislation, ideas on ways to better our community, or even just to introduce yourself. Please do not hesitate to email me at ellie.sato@legislature.maine.gov, or call the House Democratic Office at 207-287-1430.

Rep. Ellie Sato, D-Gorham, is serving her first term in the Maine House of Representatives and is a member of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee.

CORRECTION: Everyone loved the story in the last issue about the coin that was found under the tennis court. We have since learned that the hero of the story, DJ, does not work for Shaw Brothers, but for Gorham's Public Works Department.

Seedlings to Sunflowers - Non-Profit Childcare Center

JoAnn Leib, Staff Writer

1. Sunflower Community Playspace & Cafe located at 3 Gorham Industrial Parkway open to the public. 2. Sunflowers growing at the entrance of Seedlings to Sunflowers' Infant and Toddler location at 11 South Gorham Crossing. This outdoor space also includes a large greenhouse. 3. Lead Teacher, Mr. Levi, reading outside to Gardeners 2 Public PreK Classroom at Seedlings to Sunflowers Gorham Industrial Parkway campus.

Seedlings to Sunflowers describes itself as a high-quality, non-profit school and family center with a progressive approach to early education and child development. Since the founders believed that all roads lead back to how we value our children, they wanted to provide the best health and education plan possible for the children in their care.

Meghann Carrasco, executive director, and the professionals who work with her at the two campus locations for Seedlings to Sunflowers, still agree with the original premise: let's help families to create happy, thriving kids.

S2S (as Seedlings to Sunflowers is tagged) is a twin hub of bubbly child activity located at 11 South Gorham Crossing and at 3 Gorham Industrial Parkway in Gorham. Our visit to the sites was designed to learn more about both the history and the evolution of the program.

The doors opened at the first location in June 2018 with room for 20 pre-K children and 70 spots for infants and toddlers. There were teachers, administrators, and a chef. The staff was steeped in early ed philosophy and eager to set up tidy, inviting classrooms.

Fast forward, and the present atmosphere is genuinely welcoming. The classrooms are cheery and colorful; kids are busy and smiling. S2S has expanded, and the program mission has grown. The Industrial Parkway site opened in October, 2023.

In 2024 the doors opened on Sunflower Community Playspace and Cafe, an inviting part of the same building and serving beverages and light snacks.

A recent Maine Community Foundation Community Building Grant of $10,000 will outfit a new community room that will offer children's and parenting classes.

The principals envisioned teaching space of course, but simultaneously hoped to build raised-bed gardening stations so that littles could dig in the soil. They initiated the additions of a seasonal butterfly release, a large greenhouse, a nature play-garden, and imaginary travel, currently, a cultural "visit" to Costa Rica and Australia.

Practically speaking, these teachers were and are also informed by holistic approaches to pre-K and early childhood education, and in that way their current curriculum is rich and creative. They saw the need for after-care coverage and set up a plan for monitoring the 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. hours for up to ten-year-olds.

They wanted both arts and science offerings and built in special guest educator visits, including monthly collaboration with Dance Studio of Maine and KindKid Music. Special educators include Sparks Ark, Tinker Bus, Maine Audubon and others. Add visits to Coastal Maine Botanical Gardens and from the UMaine Touch Tank, Dragon Fire Martial Arts, and Mad Science, and you have a slice of their adventurous and now-available content.

S2S is partnered with Gorham Public Schools and has two public pre-K classrooms. They are currently enrolling students at both of their school locations. At their Industrial Parkway location, there are two private pre-K classes (where there are currently nine spots available), in addition to the two public pre-K classes (where there are currently two spots available), and 2 preschool classrooms (where there are currently eleven 3-4 year old spots available). Their infant and toddler location at 11 South Gorham Crossing has three infant spots, four 1-2 year old spots, and ten 2-3 year old spots available.

There are options for 3, 4, and 5 days of care. Equitable access is supported by discounted tuition for low-income families. Additionally, Seedlings to Sunflowers maintains an optional healthy food plan which includes breakfast, two snacks and lunch.

For those parents who want to plan ahead, there is a summer camp for pre-K graduates and other options, with more information on year-round programs at the seedlingstosunflowers.org website.

For enrollment questions and to schedule a tour, Executive Director Meghann Carrasco is reachable at: meghann@seedlingstosunflowers.org. Marketing Coordinator Caitlin Diggles is available to discuss all aspects of the day-to-day S2S media operations at: caitlin@seedlingstosunflowers.org. Look for announcements on two upcoming open house events, one on Friday, Aug. 1 at 5 p.m., and one on Aug. 7 at 5 p.m., and note that S2S is on Facebook and Instagram.

Freshly Cooked Meals Delivered to Your Door

Patrick and Cindy O'Shea, Staff Writers

Every week Johanna Conlan and Sophie Sawyer can be found in the First Parish Church kitchen creating classic recipes with a creative twist. They are the owners of Pine Point Provisions, a meal delivery service that delivers fully prepared meals to your door in Gorham, Scarborough, South Portland, Cape Elizabeth, and Buxton every Friday. They currently have over 300 subscribers who receive their weekly menu.

Conlan and Sawyer were inspired to start their company because of their mutual love for cooking. They were both avid home cooks often preparing meals for family and friends. While working together at a local kitchen they developed a loyal following that made them realize there was a market for their food.

They knew that owning their own business would give them the freedom to get creative with menus and serve the kind of food they love to eat. However, finding a space for a small startup was a challenge. They were fortunate to come across an ad for a kitchen rental at the First Parish Church in Gorham. They said that everyone at the church has been supportive and encouraging. They feel fortunate to have found them.

Each week they put out a new menu featuring soups, salads, entrees, quiche, pasta salads and desserts. The idea is that customers can order from their website anytime between Friday afternoon through Monday. The order is delivered to your door on the following Friday and you have delicious, homemade provisions for the entire week. Hence the name Pine Point Provisions.

Some of their most popular items are: dinners such as home-style meatloaf, ham, pork loin, chicken salad, quiche, pasta salads, pumpkin bread and rice pudding.

If you want to try their food before placing a full order you can find them at the Gorham Farmers Market. Beginning Saturday, July 26, they will be at the Gorham Farmers Market every other Saturday. Find more information at pinepointprovisions.com

Strangers in a Strange Land

Bruce Webb, Contributing Writer

For those of us over 65, the world seems to be less familiar and more alien by the year. This is counterintuitive because the expectation is that age bestows wisdom and a greater cumulative knowledge about how the world works. While this is largely accurate in my experience, I am baffled by some of the changes experienced in the last 20 years especially regarding technology.

As an early adopter of technology, I love science and am always eager to embrace new technology yet there is a disconnect between the comfortable world we once knew and the reality of today's world. If you ever operated a slide rule, used a party line phone, and thrived on 8-track tapes, the current world can be a mysterious place and one for which we are poorly equipped.

Many colleagues are even more baffled about navigating the intricacies of smart TVs, Google search, mobile phones, and the Internet - so I am not a solo traveler on this journey through the wilderness. This bewilderment comes at a stage of life when cognitive acuity is declining just as technology is accelerating at warp speed. Many in my generation are flummoxed by questions such as - what is my password, what is an authentication code, why do I need it, where can I find it, what is an app and how do I use it?

This added complexity and confusion is frustrating and contrary to the expectation that we would enjoy our "golden years." We can spend hours trying to figure out how to get access to our online banking accounts, filling out forms, learning new apps and chasing down contact information. Social networks have varied rules; some people will use email and avoid texting, others vice versa thereby missing out on important information, leading to confusion and also to social isolation. One of the major risks of aging is that we tend to lose friends, relatives or work colleagues, and become more withdrawn from our normal relationships and contacts.

Given the plethora of new products and services, we each need to consciously decide what technology tools to adopt and avoid those that are not worth the effort. I have decided to give up on any social media because they can be a real time-suck, and they distract me from tasks that I find more enjoyable. Some technical tools can be helpful - Google wallet, Gmail, online banking, messaging, a limited number of news sites, and document apps.

The following strategy can help manage technology challenges:

- Limit tech to a few applications that offer the greatest benefit with the least effort.
- Reduce interaction with online tools - simple is best.
- Learn new skills to help you master a few useful tech tools.
- Ask for help when needed and recognize that things will change soon. Younger people are helpful and there are lots of YouTube lessons.
- Focus on tools that make life easier, help you stay in contact with others who are important and increase the quality of communication and learning.

This sense of alienation is becoming more acute because the rate of technological change is accelerating at a time when people are living longer and spending more time in retirement than in their work lives. The core skill needed as we age is to embrace and adapt to change and do the best we can with the tools we have available.

Good News About Plastic

Chris Crawford, Features Editor

It's difficult to believe, but virtually all the plastic that has ever been produced is still right here on earth. Millions of tons are in our landfills, oceans, our food, and worst of all in our bodies. Even newborns have it in their systems from the moment they are born. It's also in the breast milk they drink.

Traditional plastics, made from petroleum, are virtually indestructible. It is cheap to make, easy to mold into shape and extremely durable. This pervasive material is part of every aspect of our lives. The Japanese government estimates about 150 million tons of plastic waste currently drift throughout our oceans, a figure that is rising by about eight million tons each year.

More bad news for us and our planet is that it can take 100's to 1000's of years for even a flimsy ziploc bag to break down. Far worse is the fact that plastic never fully disappears. Instead, it breaks down into ever small particles, which still last forever and are easily ingestible by every living creature on our planet. It is becoming more difficult to find companies willing to accept plastic for recycling.

In a significant development, Japanese scientists have developed a durable, non-petroleum based, biodegradable plastic that dissolves in seawater (and other saline solutions) within three to six months. In soil, it only takes about 10 days to break down into nitrogen and phosphorus, natural ingredients which can be helpful, in small amounts, acting like a fertilizer for plants and microbes. In larger amounts, nitrogen and phosphorus could be somewhat hazardous, so recycling facilities might still be needed to guard against excessive amounts building up and harming the environment.

The developers of this new plastic claim that even if some of these new plastics do end up in the ocean, they would be considerably less harmful than petroleum-based products. The new plastic is also non-flammable and non-toxic.

How is this new product made? Without getting too technical, by slightly tweaking the two main ingredients, sodium hexametaphosphate (a common food additive) and guanidinium sulfate, (a glue-like substance) the scientists were able to produce plastics that had varying degrees of hardness, thickness and strength. This means it can be customized according to purpose: hard scratch-resistant plastics, rubber silicone-like plastics, strong weight-bearing plastics are all possible. The new plastic can be used in 3D printing and medical or health-related products, too.

So hurry for science and research. While they helped create the dangers of an overabundance of plastic in our environment, now they are developing ways to help fix it.

Couscous Sausage Pepper Bake

- 2 to 3 cups cooked couscous
- 1lb turkey sausage cooked and crumbled
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 red pepper, chopped
- 1 teaspoon cumin
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- Salt & pepper to taste
- 4 tablespoons Mozzarella cheese, shredded
- 4 green peppers, top off and cleaned for stuffing

Combine all ingredients for stuffing green peppers. Stuff peppers firmly with mixture. Top with shredded Mozzarella cheese. Place in baking pan and bake for 35 minutes, until top is golden brown.

GHS Teacher Publishes Maine-inspired Book

Abigail Chamberlin, GHS 2025 Graduate Intern

Dave Patterson and his new book "Euphoria" released in early July, 2025.

Dave Patterson, affectionately known as Mr. Patterson to his GHS English and Creative Writing students, published his new book entitled "Euphoria" in early July. The book is a collection of ten short stories that take place in Euphoria, a fictional Maine town.

These connected stories paint the picture of a "struggling mill town far from the ocean with its bright tourism glow and Vacationland aura. The characters sticking it out in Euphoria live in a setting that offers both solace and brutal indifference," Patterson describes.

All of these simultaneous perspectives and lives occur over the course of one dreary winter; the stories in "Euphoria" range from escaped zoo animals, to honest and tragic depictions of struggles with addiction, to old friends, to domestic unrest. Despite not being from Maine originally, Patterson believes that Euphoria's "rural grit, sagging mill, and indifference to its characters is an amalgamation of [his] scrappy childhood in northern Vermont near the Canadian border and [his] twenty-plus years of living in Maine and working in rural high schools in the state."

He is passionate about telling the stories of rural New England towns that have fallen from thriving communities to struggling to stay afloat, as he came from these towns and grew up among people with similar experiences. "It's my greatest literary ambition to make high art out of lower-middle-class lives," says Patterson.

He draws inspiration from Richard Russo, a Pulitzer Prize winning author who is in conversation with Patterson for his book launch at Print: A Bookstore in Portland, on Tuesday, Aug. 12. The publication of the realistic and vivid stories that make up "Euphoria" has advanced Patterson's journey as an author, and GHS and its students are simultaneously proud and fortunate to call him a teacher and friend.

Grads Named Mitchell Scholars

Gorham Times Staff

Gorham graduates Mina Sayed and Madison Tibbals have been named 2025 Mitchell Scholars by the Mitchell Institute. According to the Mitchell Institute, the scholars join more than 3,800 past recipients who have been unlocking their potential, having successful college experiences and contributing to the vitality of their communities since 1995. Students receive a $10,000 scholarship award, along with ongoing personal and professional support to ensure they find success in their journey throughout college and beyond.

Jared Cash, Mitchell Institute CEO said, "Senator Mitchell realized a bold vision when he created the Mitchell Institute -- to increase the likelihood that young people from every community in Maine will aspire to, pursue, and achieve a college education. In our 30th year, his vision is more important than ever before. We're proud to support these remarkable young people as they begin journeys that will benefit Maine for generations to come."

Each year the Mitchell Institute receives more than 1,600 applications and is tasked with choosing at least one student from every public school in the state. Scholars are chosen with a balanced view of their financial needs, academic achievement, and community impact. This year marks the largest class in Mitchell's thirty-year history - with 200 scholars in total.

2025 is unique in more ways than just the numbers: "Every part of the Mitchell community had a hand in choosing who made up the incoming class," said Casey Near, scholarship director. "I was joined by our access ambassadors to help promote the Mitchell Institute on visits to high schools, and alumni were able to read applications for the first time ever, along with the staff and board to help select recipients."

The Mitchell Institute strengthens Maine communities by providing a path to success in college and beyond.

Gorham Represents in 35th Lobster Bowl Classic

Jack Karlonas with the 35th annual Lobster Bowl Classic trophy

The 35th Annual Maine Shrine Lobster Bowl Classic kicked off Saturday, July 19 at Lewiston High School's Don Roux Field. The event featured 140 of Maine's premiere high school football all-stars.

Jack Karlonas GHS '25 laced up his cleats for the event one last time. Karlonas started the game for the West team, in the outside linebacker position. According to his high school varsity coach, Sam Morrison, he was also a part of several special teams. The East was led by Portland High school quarterback, Louis Thurston, who led the Bulldogs to the state championship this past season.

Similar to Karlonas, Thurston said, "this game means the most, it's probably going to be the last time I suit up, and to do it for a great cause couldn't be a better way to end it." This event means so much to the entire football community and exceeded expectations for the players and the coaches. All participants broke a fundraising record, raising $236,000 for Maine Shriners Children's Hospitals.

A lot of memories were made all week long, starting with the team training camp held at Foxcroft Academy where players participated in many practices, a lake trip, bowling trip, and a leadership trip with the national guard. The team then made their way back to Lewiston for the banquet celebrating coaches, players, and cheerleaders for their incredible efforts in raising money for the Shriners Children's Hospitals.

After months of preparation and their week-long training camp, on July 19 it was time to shine on the field with the annual

East v. West football game with a spectacular halftime performance put on by the all-star cheerleading squad. The West scored early and with a slow start in the second half for both sides, the West would pull away with a cool touchdown from MVP quarterback Jamier Rose (Noble) to CJ Cooper (Bonny Eagle). The West would prevail for a second straight year with a 41-6 win, with the biggest accomplishment, of course, being surpassing their fundraising goals.

This would be the final football game of Karlonas's career after being a two-time all conference player, Fitzpatrick trophy semifinalist, and the National Football Foundation Scholar Athlete. Kudos to Karlonas and to Coach Morrison for being key players in this momentous event.

Gorham Scout Troop 73 Canoe Trip

Gorham Scout Troop 73 recently completed a four-day canoe trip down the Moose River in Jackman, Maine. The scouts applied their whitewater knowledge and paddling skills, facing various challenges throughout the expedition. In preparation for the trip, the scouts learned how to read and navigate whitewater. They also had a paddling clinic at Shaw Park to practice their techniques.

The Moose River trip offered a chance to experience real whitewater conditions and test their newly acquired skills. "Running whitewater on the trip was a whole different experience than practicing in the park," said one of the troop leaders. "But these boys really rose to the occasion. Their preparation paid off."

The expedition began with a challenge on the first night when the group endured a microburst while camped on the shores of Holeb Pond. This sudden, intense downdraft brought high winds and heavy rain, testing the scouts' ability to maintain their composure and secure their camp in adverse conditions. During the trip, other challenges included a quarter-mile portage around Holeb Falls, where they had to carry their canoes and gear over rugged terrain. One day also involved a longer paddle that ended with a three-mile crossing of Attean Lake against a stiff wind. These experiences provided the scouts with valuable lessons in outdoor skills and teamwork.

Despite the physical demands and unexpected obstacles, all participants had a great time, with the trip fostering camaraderie and a deeper appreciation for the outdoors. The adventure not only reinforced their paddling and navigation skills but also instilled confidence and self-reliance in the young scouts.

Gorham Scout Troop 73 thanks Cindy Hazelton of Gorham Parks and Recreation for lending them canoes, and the community at large for supporting their recent rummage sale fundraiser, which helped make the trip possible.

each student and helps them finalize a resume. They interview each student and provide financial assistance to remove barriers to a career. Flagg noted that on average, about 70% of students participating in the Immersion Program qualify and receive assistance such as gas cards, a career coach, and supplies as needed.

All students leave the program with a developed resume, new steel-toed boots, and a duffel bag with the required Personal Protection Equipment (PPE) for a jobsite, provided by MCA. In addition, all successful participants are guaranteed interviews with employers and post-secondary institutions at a job fair held upon completion, and receive a complete Milwaukee toolset, and a check for $800.

Flagg explained that AGC Maine has accessed grant opportunities through Maine Dept. of Labor, Dept. of Transportation, and the Governor's Clean Energy Partnership, among others, to help fund the program. In addition to the supplies provided, AGC Maine oversees all programs, secures the training modules, provides the curriculum, trains and certifies the instructor for each program site, and arranges the site visits with their members.

Flagg noted that their team is managing lots of logistics, but is driven by the success of the program, with interest and participation continuing to grow steadily. This year, the Gorham site had a waitlist with 28 applicants. The success extends beyond the time in the program; Flagg noted that in post surveys, 50% of participants had jobs in the construction industry, while half of those were in a formal trades internship.

Gorham School Department was a strong proponent and early adopter of the program, signing on in 2022 for the inaugural year. Flagg noted that Superintendent Perry helped to work out logistics such as space and transportation, and each year the school department staff and that of MCA refine and have grown the program. The program is housed in Gorham Middle School, and staffed by Heather Dupuis, a second-grade teacher at Great Falls Elementary School.

Dupuis answered the email sent by the school department in its first year, seeking an instructor for the summer program, because her father and family are in the construction and building trades, and she was eager to help students explore the career opportunities that exist in Maine. As both an educator and a mother, she knew an expanded and guided pathway toward skilled trades could benefit Gorham students, and the community.

Dupuis completed a 24-hour instructors training and provides the instruction and support to ensure students earn their national credentials. She serves as a chaperone and program site supervisor to enable a smooth operation. Dupuis was quick to credit the many Gorham School Department staff who lend their support and technical assistance, including those in the Aspire program, and the facilities, technology and transportation departments.

This program is free to participants, and Flagg hopes that not only will these programs continue, but that the model and the collaborative partnerships will grow. "AGC Maine is committed to this program and to our local Maine communities," said Flagg. "We look forward to offering Gorham area students this program for years to come."

Vigorous Tenderness Performs At Gambo Preserve

The "Vigorous Tenderness" grouping of seven chamber music performances celebrating the summer solstice took place on Friday, June 20, in the Gambo Preserve near Gambo Falls. These concerts of classical/experimental music take place four times per year in various locations around the greater Portland area, on the evenings of the summer and winter solstices and the autumn and spring equinoxes.

Caller was concerned about finding a pile of lighters and rolling papers in her old barn.

Three Good Samaritans helped an individual to keep her safe. Officer felt they should get a coin and a certificate of merit for their actions.

Caller stated that she had a photo captured of a person at 0300 hours and wanted to ask if the department needed it for anything. Officer informed her that the department didn't need it.

Trespass notices served via phone as individual would not tell officer where he was in order to be served and would not come pick up.

Caller complaining about another individual and the junk on the lawn. Officer referred her to code enforcement. Caller wanted to make GPD aware that she saw a male subject in their backyard the day prior and thought it was suspicious. Officer informed her that if it happened again to call us right away and not wait a day. She understood.

Individual brought his toddler to the station as he was interested in the police and had not met any before. After turning it off and securing it, officer showed him the inside of his cruiser and taught him about some of the things in it. The toddler was shy but seemed interested.

Officer observed a truck pulled over with its hazards on just after the roundabout. Officer spoke with the driver who told him his truck was okay and just needed to idle for a bit before getting back on the road.

Caller told officer that she believed an individual had placed a tracker in her car, and it was the reason her headlights were out. She told officer that the other individual used an app on her phone to locate radio frequencies that were coming from her car. Since she is a resident of Standish, officer referred her to the deputy at the substation.

Caller was upset about some bumper stickers she had seen on a car parked in town. Officer advised that the bumper stickers fell under the freedom of speech, and there was nothing the Police Department could do.

Individual called in to report vehicles that had been driving fast up and down Middle Jam Rd. Officer spoke with him on the phone and he told officer that it was occurring regularly in the afternoon in that area. Officer told him that he would be around that area at that time in order to enforce traffic. Later on when officer was on Middle Jam Rd., a different home owner flagged him down and informed him of a similar complaint happening nearby in the morning. Officer placed a role call to the rest of the Department regarding the numerous speed complaints.
